ANNOUNCING

Canada Centennial Fellowships for Post Graduate Studies

This fellowship program has been established to support university education at the graduate level, one of the urgent needs of the Canadian educational system. It will provide significant financial assistance to universities and to students who have demonstrated academic excellence, and thus encourage them to achieve, in Canada, their educational objectives at the post graduate level.

The Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada will administer the program.

When you're a pioneer starting your 150th year of activity you have plenty to remember. Especially when you've made financial history, like laying the cornerstone of this country's banking system—fifty years before Confederation. At this time we could be looking back on a long record of achievement. Instead, we're looking ahead—well ahead. Canada's First Bank may be an old-timer but it has the youngest outlook in banking.

The Play's The Thing

by Lilian Vaux MacKinnon

There it was—the beginning of my joy.

Tacked on the door of the Mathematics Room, second floor of the Old Arts Building, was a notice running something like this:

All students interested in dramatic work are asked to meet here tomorrow at 5 p.m. to arrange for readings from Shakespeare—the purpose being to form a Dramatic Club.

The date was October, 1899, when I was a freshette at Queen's.

How thrilling it must be for the students of the early 30's to recall their days of the Drama Guild, with their famous classmate and actor-director, Lorne Greene, now Ben Cartwright on the TV-show Bonanza and still a devoted Queen's man! But fancy the pride of those of us who witnessed the very birth of the Dramatic Club, forerunner of the Drama Guild, at the turn of the century.

The instigator, the promoter of that first venture into the fascinating world of the thespians, was the young and brilliant professor of Mental Philosophy—Dr. Samuel Walters Dyde, a native of Ottawa. His student assistant and chief actor was George MacKinnon, also of Ottawa, as is Lorne Greene. MacKinnon's name was appended to the notice. I determined to be present.

As I sat among the crowd of girls and men in the Mathematics classroom that autumn afternoon my heart was strangely stirred. Never had our home collegiate institute given us an opportu-

ity for dramatic endeavour. I felt an urge to participate, but I was an unknown quantity.

Yet, among the important senior girls in the gathering, there were two who were aware of my inclination.

In those early years it was the custom for the senior girls to call on the newcomers. Two of the most outstanding, May Best (later Mrs. Watt) and Selina Storry had, the previous week, called at my boarding-house, left cards, and invited me to their boarding-house for supper. Afterwards, seated in their bedroom, on the curving top of a trunk—my chosen seat as being more unconventional than a mere chair—relaxed and free, I had regaled them with collegiate chatter interspersed with recitations which included "Jabberwocky," "There was a lady loved a swine," with a verse rendered musically, from the "Owl and the Pussy Cat" thrown in, and I had evidently made an impression.

So, when names were called to try out parts from As You Like It, mine was proffered by these self-same seniors, and I was eventually chosen for Rosalind.

But As You Like It was not staged at that time, for the chosen Rosalind demurred at donning doublet and hose.

I can see her yet, that freshette, on a snowy afternoon in the late autumn emerging from the old rink in company with a tall, dark theolog. She was tall too, and thin and auburn-haired, and acutely conscious of her escort. Fancy an M.A., a medallist in Philosophy, a sport and a first-year Divinity student, accompanying her home! And, coming toward them, Professor Dyde himself, cutting across the snowy campus to intercept them. His brilliant smile was directed towards his special philosophy student with a disarming glance at the girl beside him. He had a question for her.

"Well, have you made up your mind about Rosalind?"

Then, in a laughing aside to the man "What do you think of a girl who says she's in love with Orlando?"

His laugh rang out in the frosty air. Once more addressing her, he asked "Shall we plan to stage As You Like It with Rosalind in doublet and hose?"

Oh, those early, prudish days while Queen Victoria was still with us, and all the old inhibitions held firm! An appealing look was cast in the professor's direction, then resolutely, "No, I would rather not, Professor Dyde!"

The answer was unequivocal. But could he possibly know the anguish of relinquishing that prized part to someone else? Could he realize how decorum had warred with desire?

A shade of disappointment showed on his face. He did not press the point. But though the play was read throughout the winter, by various members of that first dramatic club, it was never publicly presented.

Nonetheless one was now personally acquainted with Professor Dyde. Up to this time he had been merely a figure on the far-off-platform of his classroom, always a crowded one, for Junior Philosophy was required of every freshie — a man who laughed away foolish answers, encouraged faltering questions, and put incriminating ones in his turn. I had been intrigued by him from the very start, when, meeting Chrissie Fenwick, who had claimed him as her uncle, she had pointed out his home on the campus, and told of his children, Farrell, Christina, and Sandy (Honora was still to come). Encouraged by this encounter and by being chosen as Rosalind I had rushed up to him after that first meeting, to ask about the essay he had assigned in philosophy on the Summum Bonus only to be answered by a ringing laugh and a withering reply, "I don't know the first thing about it," and had beat a hasty, discomfited retreat.

But I had not been forgotten, for the following autumn, when the trial scene from The Merchant of Venice was to be studied, I was chosen to take the part of Portia. This, the first public appearance of the Queen's Dramatic Club, was staged in old Convocation Hall, March 16, 1901.

What a time we had! All the professors' wives lent portieres for the platform. They arranged them as harmoniously as possible — the various patterns and colours. We sent to Toronto for most of the costumes, though Portia's gown had to have a piece added to its length. Her headgear? Why, Mrs. Dyde commandeered Farrell's blue cap, worn back to front, with a bit of feather tacked to the side. What an honour to remember that one wore the cap of a future Rhodes Scholar and Dean of Boulder University in Colorado! The Kingston Whig reported: "Every available inch of room in Convocation Hall was occupied, the whole production was good, and reflects great credit upon the students."

Most credit belonged to the founder, Samuel Walters Dyde! But who could do justice to that unique personality? To confine his teaching to that of Philosophy, Mental so-called, would be to set limits to "one of the last of the universal minds," as Goethe was deemed to be. He founded the Dramatic Club because he loved Shakespeare, lectured on the great playwright as only one could do who was conversant with every play and acquainted with every character. He introduced succeeding generations of Queen's students to that master of the English language.

Not content with his first success, the intrepid Dramatic Club proceeded to further endeavours. They would give rehearsals at the Ontario Hospital, where Dr. Clarke welcomed this healthy diversion for his patients. There were some exciting interruptions, as when Shylock, whetting his knife on the sole of his shoe in greedy anticipation of the pound of flesh, was arrested by a cry from the audience, "No more of that, young man! No more of that!"

Now about this time, in the expansion of Queen's, there began to be mooted the idea of Grant Hall, a memorial to the beloved Principal George Monro Grant. This was primarily a student project and promised better facilities for dramatic effort. What then could be more fitting than that the Dramatic Club should contribute towards the building fund? It was the day of small things, and Queen's fervently believed in the Scottish adage

"Mony mickle mak a muckle." So, with supreme confidence in the University's and City's support of their undertaking, they rented the leading theatre and practised assiduously for months in preparation for presenting in Kingston's Grand Opera House in January, 1902, a Shakespearian recital including Act III of Hamlet. The part of Hamlet was taken by George MacKinnon and that of Ophelia by Isabel Bryson, both of Ottawa. The honorary president was Professor John Watson, the eminent philosopher, and critic, Prof. James Cappon. The training of the actors, all undergraduates, was done exclusively by Prof. S. W. Dyde.

Success crowned their efforts. The house was packed, and when all expenses had been met the building fund of Grant Hall, that massive limestone structure, was enriched by the neat sum of One Hundred and Twenty-Five Dollars — no mean amount in those far-off days.

Sing the beginning of created things.

Around the Campus

Students and teachers from twenty-seven eastern Ontario high schools attended an Engineering Day at Queen's January 28. The students heard talks, were shown movies, and visited some of the engineering departments . . . . The name "Victoria Hall" has been approved for the new women's residence on Queen's Crescent. The name provides the University with a clear link with the monarch who signed the charter authorizing the founding of Queens in 1841 . . . . Tenders are being called for a new mathematics building and a new psychology building. Construction is expected to start in the spring and the completion date is desired by the fall of 1968 . . . . Dr. H. G. Kelly, M.D. '40, has been appointed Associate Dean of Medicine. Dr. Kelly will continue his role as Director of Continuing Education and will also lecture and teach in Medicine . . . Robert C. Webb, M.A. '50 (B.A., McMaster), formerly with Procter and Gamble in Toronto, Ont., has been appointed manager of purchasing services at Queen's.

Alumni Contribute $480,190

$159,421 was received through the Alumni Fund in 1966 — $78,916 came in via the Capital Appeal; $233,571 was received in bequests

Contributions to the Alumni Fund in 1966 amounted to $159,421 from 5,798 donors, as compared with $153,607 from 4,475 the preceding year.

The increase of 3 per cent regains in part the ground lost last year attributed to the Capital Appeal competition. It is hoped that by the end of 1967 a new high total in excess of $165,000 will be realized.

Total alumni contributions to the University in 1966 came to $480,190: Alumni Fund, $159,421; Capital Appeal, $78,916; alumni organizations, $8,882; bequests, $233,571.

By Faculties or Schools the Alumni Fund contributions of $159,421 were as follows: Arts and Science, $58,720, from 1,468 donors; Applied Science, $58,006, from 2,128; Medicine, $32,826, from 441; Commerce, $8,713, from 375; Nursing Science, $547, from 61; and Law, $609, from 25.

There were 374 new donors, who gave a total of $3,914. Increased contributions were made by 305 for a total of $6,612. The average contribution was $27.50 and the percentage of participation was 28. The contributions were distributed as follows:

- 3,058 gave $1 to $10 — $23,117
- 1,835 gave $11 to $25 for $37,880
- 569 gave $26 to $50 for $25,063
- 228 gave $51 to $100 for $21,593
- 62 gave $101 to $200 for $12,031
- 32 gave $201 to $500 for $8,266
- 4 gave $501 to $1,000 for $3,784
- 10 gave more than $1,000—$27,687

Four appeals were sent out during the year. The first, in April, brought in $44,000; second, June, $36,295; third, September, $34,996; fourth, December, $31,510.

The amount of $12,620 was sent in prior to the first appeal.

Of the $159,421 the sum of $28,575 was received from 493 donors through the Friends of Queen's Inc., with headquarters in New York City, and under the chairmanship of Dr. John E. Hammett.

The corporate alumnus program produced $2,169, a new high total. Under this plan participating companies match the contributions of employees.

By classes, the number of alumni contributors and the amount of their contributions to the Alumni Fund during 1966 were as follows:

THE JOCK HARTY ARENA is scheduled for demolition to make way for a new psychology building, a fact that prompted students and groups of interested alumni to scurry around to find sources of financial assistance when the Board of Trustees was not able to solve immediately the problem of replacement. At the time the Review goes to press the provincial government has indicated a willingness to pay up to half the cost of construction, and the students have voted in favour of a special levy of $4 a year for twenty-five years, if required.

CONCRETE AT EXPO 67

Where you look at EXPO 67 you see what versatile concrete is. From the broad, smooth, safe expressways and the changes that lead to the Expo Islands, to the inviting Place des Nations and the bright reflecting Dolphin soaring columns and gracefully contoured roofs, concrete in structural form the most advanced design concepts. The versatility of concrete more dramatic than in Expo's most talked about structures . . . Habitat 67, the Expo Stadium and the Man and Music Pavilion. These and many other important Expo structures are built of concrete made with "Canada" cement, a Canadian product made by a Canadian owned Company.

Established in 1909, the Canada Cement Company is the pioneer of the Cement Industry in this country.

Dr. J. A. Corry

To Retire

Principal of Queen's University since 1961, Dr. J. A. Corry has announced his intention to retire in late 1968.

When Dr. Corry was appointed in 1961 it was on the understanding that he would not remain in the post for more than seven years. In a letter to the staff this spring, he wrote: "Aside from personal considerations, there are good reasons for sticking to this limit on the appointment. Changing circumstances and the growing complexities of our affairs call for fresh thinking. Also, by 1968, we shall have to face more and more decisions about our policy for the 1970's and the person who is to carry out the responsibilities of Principal in that period should be associated with the decisions."

The search for a successor has started. A joint committee of seven members of the University Senate and seven members of the Board of Trustees has been set up under the chairmanship of Chancellor J. B. Stirling to search out the man who will become the next Principal.

The Problem of the Rootless Student

With the type of student temperament that appears in the universities today, a greater burden is laid on the professional side to meet and help the modern student to find his feet for he is confused as never before.

This article is based on a talk given by Prof. A. R. C. Duncan to the Guelph Alumni

by A. R. C. Duncan

TEN YEARS AGO QUEEN'S WAS a comparatively small university of some 2,500 students distributed over the three Faculties of Arts, Medicine and Applied Science. There were also some 120 graduate students. Today the university has more than twice that number of students, some 5,300, and they are distributed over four Faculties (in 1957 the Faculty of Law came into existence), a School of Business (1960), and a full-blown School of Graduate Studies with over 700 students (it has grown to seven times its size in 1957) and a Dean of its own. The number of buildings on the campus has greatly increased — between 1957 and today fifteen major new buildings have been erected and put into use (four student residences, Chown '59, Leonard '60, Brockington '65, Victoria '65; two medical buildings, Physiology '57 and Etherington Hall '58; five science buildings, Ellis '58, Frost Chemical Wing '61, Stirling '62, Earl '64, and Chemical Engineering '65; two for Arts, Dunlop '59, and Humanities '67; the Law Faculty acquired its own building, Macdonald Hall, in '60; and the University acquired an Art Centre in '62). More students, more faculties, more buildings — and of course more committees and infinitely more in the way of administrative chores.

There are of course also more professors. In 1957 the grand total at Queen's was 210, with more than 100 in the Faculty of Arts; today the total is 689 with 306 in the Faculty of Arts and Science. It is interesting to reflect that the Faculty of Arts and Science with its 2,967 students is today larger than the whole of Queen's ten years ago.

Now all these are impressive figures. We've doubled in size, both in students and buildings, we hold our own academically, and everyone is enormously busy. If you judge a university by such superficial things as the number of students buildings, then we certainly are not doing badly. However, I want to refer to a change of a rather different and, I believe, very much more important kind, a change much more difficult to put one's finger on and to describe, but change which is there and which must be faced both at Queen's and elsewhere. I am referring to what may be called the mood of the student body.

There are and always have been many different types of students, and the motives for university attendance have always varied greatly. There are those who know exactly what they want to get out of it and who go right ahead and get it. There are always some of these, though generally they are a small minority in the student population — and they are the lucky ones. There are others who are much less sure of why they are at the university and of what they can expect to get out of it. They are the majority and today this majority has certain characteristics which mark it off from earlier generations of students to such an extent that we are justified in calling it a new problem. On the one side we hear reports of a sense of rootlessness among the students, a feeling which they often express by saying that what they are invited to do at the university is somehow completely irrelevant to life as they know it or think it to be. Call it perhaps a sense of frustration — and in some centres this frustration has broken out in the form of student riots.

We have not had such manifestations at Queen's, and I sincerely hope that we do not, but I do not want to be the kind of fool who says 'It can't happen here'. I would rather say "It hasn't happened here, but let us tackle the situation as it is and try to make sure that there is no reason why it should happen here." It is a human problem, and if we are aware of its existence, and take note of its nature, then we may be able to lick it.

But just what kind of a problem is this problem of what I shall call the rootless student? It is not a problem confined to Queen's nor even to Canada, nor yet to North America, though it may be slightly more acute in North America than in Europe as yet, though I am not too sure even of that. The point I want to suggest is that it is not merely a student problem, it is the reflection in the student body of our problem in society today. The plain fact, it seems to me, whether we are aware of it or not, is that western society is being subjected to radically new strains and tensions and as human beings we have not fully adjusted to them. The young members of society are probably by nature a good deal more sensitive to them than are we older people, and they have not yet had time to develop the kind of protective armour in which older people wrap themselves. Let me explain in a little more detail what I mean, both by the strains and tensions and by my phrase "protective armour".

The biggest single historical event between the birth of Christ and our own time is without any shadow of doubt the scientific revolution which took place in the seventeenth century. Let me quote the words of a very distinguished historian: "it has changed the character of men's habitual mental operations even in the conduct of the non-material sciences, while transforming the whole diagram of the physical universe and the very texture of human life itself." These are either mere words or they refer to a stark reality, and I believe they refer to a reality. The words to which I would specially direct your attention are the closing words: 'changed the very texture of human life itself'. We know something, but not perhaps a great deal, about how this has happened. There is however a second event also of genuinely world-shaking significance of which we must take note and it is still in process of taking place. I am referring to the technological revolution, and the plain fact is that we do not know at all where it is taking us.

With the arrival of science, men thought in terms of power but not that it might get out of control

When men first realized that science had arrived, they thought in terms of the power that it would yield, but I very much doubt if they ever thought that it would develop a power which might get out of control. It was thought that science would be of great assistance in developing new industrial techniques and in the age-old fight against poverty and disease, but it was also assumed that society would follow its traditional course with no serious internal changes, very much its own master, with science called in from time to time to solve minor problems. I believe that this picture has altered rapidly and radically in the past fifty years or so. Vast, far-reaching changes have been introduced into the life of society by the work of scientists and technologists. It is important to note that these changes, radical as they are, have taken place without any overall planning by either scientists, technologists, or society itself, for time and again the attempt to solve some ad hoc problem has led to the discovery and introduction of some new and unexpected factor. Think of the enormous difference to social life that the scientific change in communications has brought about in radio and TV entertainment, and instruction has been made available to anyone who wants it; we have also through our advertising techniques — and we should face this fact — accustomed our young people to vicious misuse of language and to a calm acceptance of deceit as normal between human beings. Think also of the change in international diplomacy brought about by the threat of nuclear war. Human methods of thinking about international relations have had to change fundamentally because of this. We can no longer, as we did in 1914 and 1939, even dream of an all-out war between major powers. It is simply out of the question. But we are still faced with the problems that cause war, and we must hope that our statesmen prove capable of devising new and adequate methods of solving these problems.

Innovations of that kind, however, are dwarfed by the new movement in automation and computer techniques. A great deal of nonsense is talked about what computers can and can't do, and what is worth making them do. You can play chess with a computer — but who on earth would want to? Games are played by human beings together because they are fun.

I am concerned with the fact that it is now possible in the field of industry to produce far more than we have ever done before with a minute fraction of the labour force. This is happening and the signs suggest that it will happen faster and faster. Human beings may be faced with greater quantities of leisure or free time than have ever been known before. This is liable to change the very texture of human life more than anything that has ever happened in history. For think how history has generally read up to this century. The names and locations change, but it is basically the same story of human beings grouped in political and economic units where some, the major ones, have had to work very hard indeed to gain even a living wage, while a fortunate few, endowed with wealth or position, lived a life of leisure. These units have had their wars and their occasional revolutions when power changed hands —

there is a basic sameness about the ty. After all, these wars we used to so much about in the old style hist-books were fought by very small numbers of people — for the vast major-the daily round went on, and for most human beings that is life, the daily round.
And it is that daily round which, we told, is going to be affected by the growth of automation and computer ence.

The world of business is virtually only beginning to be affected by science.
I am not thinking there only of the employment of research scientists by large firms, but also of the impact on business methods of the scientifically trained mind which will persist in asking questions, why not this way when you can do it that, and soon. And again I am not thinking only of the natural sciences but also the social scientist, the psychologist and sociologist.
One business engineer in a recent broadcast talk said that he had on one occasion asked a sociologist as a management consultant; to his amazement he found that this young man, trained in the study of social groups, had learnt more about the workings of his firm in six months than he had in years. What this will do to business as we know it remains to be seen.

More than that, however, is the fact that through these social sciences human beings are for the first time in history beginning to think scientifically about the structure of society and social life. It is of course true that these are new sciences, they have not yet developed their basic concepts and they are still experimenting with methods, and perhaps they have as much more jargon than knowledge to their credit. But these are minor criticisms.
The point is that scientific methods are being applied to the problems of social life by young and vigorous men, and history suggests that in any field to which scientific method is applied, there are major changes. Take for instance the new science of psephology, the study of voting behaviour. Who knows what effect it will have on our democratic politics? Literally no one, least of all the psepholo-gists themselves. But, and here we meet an extremely important point, the fact that we do not know what practical application some branch of science may eventually have does not prevent the scientist pressing on in his search for knowledge.

The pure scientist as such is not concerned with practical application, his job is to acquire knowledge. What he does as a citizen is another matter. It is perhaps just as well in one way that the scientist is not required to justify the possible application of his new knowledge before he undertakes his investigation; for one thing he might not be able to justify it (space research), and secondly it might horrify him. When Rutherford at the beginning of this century discovered the atomic nucleus he gave it as his opinion that his discovery was unlikely ever to have any practical use. Only fifty years later his discovery was put to horrifying practical use at Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

All this is part of what I meant by saying that at the beginning of the scientific revolution no one ever thought we might be creating a power which would get out of control. To put it at its crudest, we support scientific enquiry to the hilt, but in so doing we literally do not know what we are doing! It is an odd situation, and I don't think it can be avoided, and it is one of the things which is bringing about new strains and tensions. You employ a scientist perhaps to do some quite specific job; you do not know, nor does he, what unexpected discovery may turn up on the side, and it may be the unexpected one which brings about the major changes. In supporting science, we are playing with fire. Now, let me say at once that in nothing that I have said do I intend to suggest that we ought not to. I am neither a Luddite urging that we destroy the machines nor am I in any sense anti-scientific. To be anti-scientific is to my mind to be utterly foolish. Science is here and it is here to stay. It is an integral part of our environment and one of the greatest achievements of the human mind. And I don't think there is much point in trying to draw up a balance sheet, as some people have tried to do, of the benefits science has brought to mankind in the way of medical discoveries and communications and so on over against the evils that it has made possible in the way of atomic and bacteriological warfare, etc. I don't know what the result of such a balance sheet would be, nor does anyone. But my immediate point would be that even if we decided, as well we might, that science has been instrumental in bringing about greater horrors in warfare and fear of war and that this outbalanced the good, we still could do little about it! And there is no point in even pretending we could.

Lest it be thought I am going too far in suggesting that we have created a power that is out of our control, let me now introduce my qualifications. I do not mean that we are utterly helpless — it is still open to us to think about it, to plan, and to put scientific knowledge to quite specific uses. What I meant was rather that as a society we do not choose what scientific discoveries are made; they come about to a large extent by chance; once they are made, however, they have their unpredictable effects on social life, and — then we are left to deal with them. In deciding to accept science, as it were, we decided, whether we knew it or not, to live dangerously. And all this has produced new strains and tensions in society, and has produced a deep sense of not knowing where we are going, and this is new. No one in the past knew where society was going, not even those who undertook revolutions. The difference today is that, whereas in the past social change was slow, very slow, today it is fast, and it is the very speed of social change that causes us, when we stop to think, to realize that we are moving rapidly but in an unknown direction.

When we stop to think. But we must not stop to think. We can, and am I right in saying that most of us do, immerse ourselves in our jobs, in our life which is pretty demanding, and in sorts of local activities. And this is what I mean by our protective armour. We may be aware, more or less vaguely, according to our temperament and education, of the sorts of changes that I have been talking about, but we are not acutely aware of the fact that we must earn our living, that the daily round must be carried on. We can — perhaps leave to the politicians the task of worrying about social change on a large scale. Whether we should do that or not is a matter for another article. And of course we must get on with our jobs as lawyers, engineers, teachers, housewives, nurses, doctors and so on. The immediate pressing problems remain there immediate and pressing. And immersion in the daily round protects us from what I may call the large scale worries.

But consider the young people who have not yet got to the stage of having a job or a husband or wife and children to worry about and to claim their own time and energy. Consider in particular, they are my concern, the young people who come to our universities to study and reflect on the world in which they are living. They have no protective armour and it is not surprising that they should be sensitive to and disturbed by the new trends in human life. I do not mean that they will necessarily be aware of it explicitly, though some of them through their studies will be brought pretty sharply up against it. It is something more subtle and more penetrating, and it is something which causes them to ask, whether consciously or unconsciously (for it produces an ethos), what it is all about, and to challenge the assumptions on which universities have been proceeding for centuries. And this is what we face in the universities today, and this too is new. It is disturbing, yes, but it is also challenging. And it seems essential that the universities, that professors in the universities, should become explicitly aware of this and face the challenge head on. I have to say that this must be faced, because you cannot assume that professors will automatically do it, for many of them have also imitated pressing problems which can act as protective armour. The scientists must defend their sciences and the linguists their languages. You might think that the philosophers could not avoid seeing this problem and facing it, but philosophers are as human as anyone else and feel the need of protective armour, and many of them have turned to the technical aspects of the subject, to logic and to semantics, so that the big problems can be avoided and held at bay.

Where do we go from here? What kind of education should we be offering our youngsters? Recently I heard a talk by a technological educationalist. I make no apology for calling him names; he deserved it! His solution to the problem of modern education was short, simple and brutal. More and more mathematics, more and more science, and no time to be wasted on such fossilised nonsense as the humanities. Only by subjecting students to a rigidly technological education could the machines of society be kept running. I was quite frankly frightened by this. The basic assumption was that the machines must be kept running and that men and women must be trained to serve them. This seems to me to lead to a new sort of slavery. Machines of all kinds are tremendous sources of power and energy, but surely the assumption on which we must work is that they are there to serve us and our needs, not that we must serve them and theirs. My recollections of reading Wells many years ago haunts me with pictures of pale anaemic creatures living underground and tending the machines. This at least we must never allow to happen.

But I am also bothered by another nightmare. In a society which is rapidly becoming mechanised, surely we must mechanise the universities — and nothing would be easier. Instead of a professor standing before his class talking to and with them, we could arrange to have the professor transformed into a clear and sweet-toned loud speaker, beautifully designed in pastel shades, which would relay a well thought-out and logically constructed set of lectures. And we are getting pretty close to this in the realm of TV where the coloured image of the professor is still retained as a sop to sentiment. By means of machines we get rid of professors. But why on earth not also get rid of students? Instead of students in varying states of sleepiness and boredom, why not have a set of accurate and well-adjusted tape recorders? No longer would the general sense of the lectures be recorded but every word would be faithfully transcribed and a hundred per cent would be the normal passing rate in exams. A completely mechanised and highly efficient system of education — and of course completely and utterly absurd.

But why is it absurd? What have we left out that makes it absurd? We have left out the human beings. But what does that mean? What matters about a machine is that it should operate efficiently. What is a human being and what matters about him? A human being is neither a machine, nor an animal, but a person. A human being can be aware of something which he calls 'I', his own self, which exists and acts in a world distinct from that self. What we call human life can be described essentially as a continuous series of experiences in which the self interacts in all manner of different ways with the world of objects and other selves. Experience in that sense is the very stuff of human life, and it cannot be observed like an object, it cannot be put on a dissecting table and sliced up to see what it is made of nor yet put under a microscope. It is something which we have, which we live in and through, the only way in which we can ever come to know anything about the experience of other persons is when they are willing to talk or write about it, that is, express it in words.

Consider some of its modes. We have the simple experience of seeing the objects around us and of taking delight in them; we hear sounds and we taste tastes. We can climb mountains and experience the exhilaration and exhaustion of a long and difficult climb; we can sail our boats and experience the tense excitement of battling with the two elements of wind and water. We meet other persons and form friendships which may give our lives much of their point and meaning. We may fall in love, get married, have children, an infinitely complex, anxiety-ridden yet infinitely satisfying form of experience. We can join groups of other persons who form associations with a common object, athletic clubs, scientific associations, universities, business firms, professional groups and so on, and take over long periods in their fortunes and misfortunes. We find ourselves in situations in which we know something must be done, but we don't know what and have to find out; or we find that we know what ought to be done but find ourselves disinclined through laziness or cowardice to do it. We can set ourselves to learn and master new skills and techniques, to acquire new knowledge and understanding. It is out of the stuff of these and many other different sorts of types of experiences that each one of us must extract that degree of satisfaction which makes us say, when we can say it, life is worth living.

But what is the relevance of this brief excursion into the nature of human existence to the problem with which I set out, the problem of the rootless student? Just

If the university is in any sense an educational institution — and I say if, there are some who would convert it into a research institute which is a very different thing indeed — we must constantly bear in mind the essential nature of those who come to it in search of what euphemistically called higher education.
They are persons, they are living centres of experience with enormous potentials for development if they can find the right path. But because they are persons, they are wills of their own, they have ideas of their own, they have ideals of their own, and in the process of education account must be taken of these. If they are completely ignored or trodden on, then only resentment can result.

Now, in a sense this was always true of the student body, but the modern student body, by and large, is a curiously distinct group which is not disposed to accord that automatic respect to their teachers which was expected in times past.
In the past respect was demanded of the teacher, today it has to be won from the student. Can any of us honestly say that this is a change for the worse? In this I stand myself entirely on the side of the teacher; genuine respect has always been accorded to those who merited it, not merely for having biologically lived for a certain time, but for having achieved something worthwhile or for some quality of mind or spirit.

What does all this mean in terms of university education? I think that to begin with we must recognize that our Canadian universities are undergoing very radical change. Until comparatively recent times the universities were centres of higher learning in two senses: in the first place because there that advances in learning

Modern students want more than proof they have passed examinations

and science were made and also passed on to the upcoming generation, and secondly, by and large only a comparatively small section of the population dreamed of attending them, those who by nature and temperament were suited to the heavy discipline of advanced study and of course also a certain section of the gilded youth who treated it as a kind of finishing school.

The universities must always be centres of higher learning in the first sense. However, with the increased pressure from society for more persons with university degrees, a far greater section of the population is clamouring for entry, and not all of them by any means are either suited to or greatly interested in higher learning.
This, it seems to me, is a hard fact which it is better to face and adjust to than to ignore.

Many of our modern students, in addition to belonging to the rootless generation, do not appear to want the sort of thing that the universities traditionally offered, and yet they want from and expect to get from the university something of greater value than a mere piece of paper certifying that they have successfully leapt over some examination hurdles! If the universities at the undergraduate level — where the vast majority of students res-

"Loon" by Daniel Fowler, 1881

ERNEST C. GILL, B.A. '23, LL.D. '57, and a former chairman of the Board of Trustees, joins a distinguished group of Queen's alumni as a benefactor of art with his recent gift of twenty-two water colour paintings by the Amherst Island artist, Daniel Fowler (1810-94). These paintings, presented to the Agnes Etherington Art Centre, were previously in the collection of Dr. J. Allan Walters of Toronto, whose interest in Daniel Fowler dates back to his school days in Napanee, Ont., where he was born.

In 1946 the Agnes Etherington Art Centre organized the first retrospective exhibition of Fowler's work, borrowing paintings from family descendants, private collections and public galleries and printing an illustrated catalogue. After showing in Kingston the exhibition travelled to other Ontario cities, reviving interest in the very real contribution of this artist, who found his inspiration in the fields, lanes and woods of his farm and surroundings on Amherst Island.

As Ralph Allen, resident artist, said, in his introduction to the catalogue: "He was now convinced of the importance of working in the open air, and working directly with colour. He was critical of his former practice of 'worrying' colour into existence from an earlier black and white sketch. In this he seems to have been one of the earliest painters in Canada to have adopted one of the principles of impressionism."

The University collection is greatly enriched by this addition and it is most appropriate that Fowler's work should be strongly represented in this important and growing collection of Canadian Art, in the region in which he farmed and painted for a great deal of his life.

The Ernest C. Gill gift of Fowler paintings will be on exhibition in the Agnes Etherington Art Centre during May, with the exception of one large one "Dawn on Amherst Island", which is on loan to the Canadian Government Exhibition at Expo '67 where it may be seen this summer.

MELVA EAGLESON RETIRES

After almost four decades of service to the Queen's University Library, Miss Melva Eagleson has retired as Reference and Research Librarian. Many graduates will remember her as an indefatigable worker who took infinite pains to solve reference problems.

Her retirement was noted in the Douglas Library bulletin: "She knew how to inspire her associates and how to draw the best from those who worked under her. Research and reference work were her passion, and even in her travels she made a point of collecting pictures, pamphlets, maps, and books for the reference collection. Her tremendous energy and sense of humour never failed her."

Other tributes:

"To generations of Queen's students, she, much more than the Chief, represented the Douglas Library, for in her domain — the old reading room — she was a daily and visible presence, and often a very present help in time of trouble." — H. P. Gundy.

"Her help and interest have been acknowledged publicly in the hundreds of theses and books, but it is remembered unspoken, though no less gratefully, by the thousands of students who call her friend." Dean V. S. Ready.

"It is not surprising that the students who have worked with her as library assistants have come to share her enthusiasm for study and research, and to understand the satisfaction that comes from public service well done. As a result, a number of them have gone on to become librarians themselves. Surely there can be no better tribute to Miss Eagleson and her work." — Eleanor Robertson.

"During all these years Miss Eagleson in her quiet way has been a constant aid to both staff members and students. When it was still not impossible, she used to know by name most of students using the library and to take personal interest in them. I can testify that she has always been helpful in digging out bits of information, checking a reference and generally helping — Dr. A. R. M. Lower.

*Levana! Levana! Women to the Fore Arts Forever! Queen's Forever!
Women's Rights or War!*

On March 1, the Arts and Science Undergraduates Society, comprising students in the Faculty of Arts and Science and the School of Business came into being, after a plebiscite asked for approval of the merger of the Arts and Science Society and the Levana Society. The students voted 80 per cent in favour of the merger, and the new constitution was later approved at general meetings.

The merger was the result of a sudden whim, but came about after years of negotiations between the Arts and Levana Societies. In recent years the intransigent and belligerent Levana yell "Women's Rights or War!" was no longer heard around the halls of Queen's. Presumably the objectives had long since been gained and the battle was over.

ide — are not to degenerate into second-rate Grade XIV high schools, which in some places they already have, then some very fundamental rethinking must be undertaken. To put my point very crudely indeed: whereas the older type of student came to the university ready to accept and fit into its traditional ethos, the new type of student comes questioning the whole thing, its methods and its offerings. And this, I would suggest is not in itself a bad thing, for if society and its needs are changing, then the universities must adapt themselves to meet these new needs, and who are in a better position to make these needs known than the students?

All this suggests that the modern professor cannot hope to rest on his academic laurels, the kinds of degrees that he holds, the aura of the great university at which he obtained them, the fact that he has written a book or set of research or scholarly articles. When he faces a body of students in the lecture room, he will be judged, and ruthlessly judged, for his mastery of his subject, for the degree of interest which he manifests both in it and in the students before him, and for his capacity to communicate both his subject and also something of his vision of the educational process as a whole. He will be judged for his honesty in attempting to live up to the ideal which is expressed by saying that the university is a community of scholars. The professor is not only the more advanced student; if he is a scientist he must be able really to lead a research team or set of teams, and if he is a humanist, then he must be prepared to enter into and seek to understand the type of experience and viewpoint which the younger students are bringing to bear on his subject, otherwise there will be no genuine contact of mind with mind. And after all, it is because the university offers an opportunity of contact between minds, that it can never be mechanised.

Of course the student must also play his part. This has always been true. What I have been claiming is that at the present time, with the type of student temperament that appears in the universities, a greater burden is laid on the professorial side to meet and help the modern student to find his feet, for never before has he arrived in such a confused state. And shouldering this burden is neither easy nor is it a matter of routine for it means critically re-examining a set of hallowed traditions about the nature and functions of a university.

How will Queen's fare in this new university age? I am not a prophet (though some of my prophesies of ten years ago have come about!) so all that is open to me is an expression of faith. In the past Queen's has faced crises of equal magnitude and has survived, stronger and better able to face its tasks. The new crisis being thrust upon us by the very nature of the new and rapidly changing world in which we live. Queen's must either rise up to and meet this new challenge or must forfeit its right to be called a modern university. It must meet this challenge. I believe that it will.

For instance, even as you scan this message, research and development teams serving our 22 CGE plants are seeking, not only to improve our existing products but are exploring many fields of potential promise. Some of these areas of interest are as dissimilar as chemical and metallurgical, hydraulics and electronics, heat transfer and aerodynamics to mention just a few.

Why such diversification? Because at Canadian General Electric we believe in making major risk investments in product fields that show future promise. These investments are based on the conviction that leadership in industry is achieved by innovation in the development and application of new products and technology more than by merely attempting to get a larger share of the market for existing products . . . and why you are sure of more of the best now, and in the future.

CANADIAN GENERAL ELECTRIC

we have these fields of activity to serve you...Atomic Power...Chemical
...Metallurgical...Construction and Power Distribution... Electronics ... Defence Products ... Housewares

REUNION 1967

October 20 - 22

WEEKEND OF THE QUEEN'S-VARSITY FOOTBALL GAME

Classes officially scheduled to attend:

1917	1931	1942	1950
	1932		1951
	*1933		1952
	1934		1953

*The Class of Science '33 is foregoing a reunion this year in favour of one marking their thirty-fifth anniversary in 1968.

Classes also planning to hold a reunion this fall are those of Science '22, Arts '22, Medicine '37, Arts '37 and Medicine '48. The Class of Science '37 also has a reunion planned for the weekend of October 7.

Please note that the above schedule is for purpose of convenience only. Any class may hold a reunion at any time.

The Alumni Office is prepared to help all reunion organizers with their arrangements, including the preparation and mailing of notices, proclamations, newsletters, class lists, and the like.

Convocation for the Faculty of Medicine, Faculty of Law, School of Nursing

Convocation 1967

• Convocation records fell this spring like soft-maple seeds in a breeze.

A total of 1,263 received degrees, eclipsing last year's high-water mark of 1,074, in a total of six — yes, six — ceremonies starting with Applied Science on May 13 and running through successive weekends until that of June 3 when the Faculty of Arts and Science concluded with a Convocation that had to be split into two to accommodate the throng.

For the first time in history the Law graduates outnumbered the graduating doctors, 54 to 57. A vivid illustration of the growth of graduate studies was given by the statistics: 27 received Ph.D. degrees, in twelve different disciplines there were 40 M.A.'s, 41 M.Sc.'s, 4 M.Sc.'s (engineering), 3 M.Sc.'s (medicine), 33 M.B.A.'s, and 19 B.D.'s.

Honorary degrees were conferred on thirteen prominent Canadians, including Mr. Justice J. R. Cartwright of the Supreme Court of Canada, the Hon. A. Crerar, the senior Privy Councillor for Canada, and M. J. Coldwell, former C.C.F. leader.

CITATIONS continued

James Merritt Harrison, LL.D.—native of Regina, who graduated eastward from the University of Manitoba to earn the first doctoral degree in geology at Queen's University, fellow of the Royal Society of Canada and of the Geological Society of America and Associate of the National Academy of Sciences in Washington, scholar, author, and public servant whose eminence as Director of the Geological Survey of Canada won him wide and inevitable recognition at home and abroad, including the presidency in 1961 of the infant International Union of Geological Sciences, and who is now Assistant Deputy Minister (Research) in the Department of Mines and Technical Surveys in the Government of Canada.

Donald Olding Hebb, LL.D.—fellow of the Royal Society of London and of the Royal Society of Canada, graduate of Dalhousie University in his native province of Nova Scotia and of McGill and Harvard, one-time member of the staff of this University, whose departure inflicted on his colleagues a desolation not yet assuaged; teacher, author, life scientist, universally celebrated for his work in experimental psychology, whose notable standing among those who share his curiosity about the springs of human behaviour led to his election in 1959 as the first non-American president of the American Psychological Association, and then to the award of its lustrous gold medal.

Richard Helmuth Manske, LL.D.—loyal and distinguished graduate of this University, fellow of the Royal Society of Canada, fellow and past president of the Chemical Institute of Canada, fellow of the Chemical Society of Great Britain, already identified in his doctoral studies at the University of Manchester as a pioneer of modern organic chemistry, both prolific and illustrious in research and writing, notable for his contributions to science as a public servant with the National Research Council, and also as Director of Research for the Dominion Rubber Company since 1943, renowned not only for his discoveries of new and unusual alkaloids in plants but for his discovery and nurturing of other talented chemists many of whom are now ornaments of Canadian universities, a horticulturist by avocation, on whose grounds are regularly bestowed figurative orchids to place beside the veritable and gorgeous ones he grows for himself.

Thomas Alexander Crerar, LL.D.—a member for fifty years of Her Majesty's Privy Council for Canada, and now the senior Privy Councillor for Canada; five times elected to the House of Commons, for twenty-two years a member of the Senate of Canada, minister of the Crown in three federal governments, whose talent for marshalling human and material resources added strength to Canada's effort in two world wars; Upper Canadian by birth, westerner by transplantation and conviction who, with vigorous mind and strong hand, he moved in turn from plough to classroom, to boardroom, and to cabinet chamber, who startled the two-party system into new sensitivity by leading the most significant third party in our history, wise in counsel, moderate in action, a reformer in the Gladstone and Laurier tradition, who tamed his regional enthusiasms to the loyal and steadfast service of one Dominion from sea to sea.

Major James William Coldwell, LL.D.—one of Her Majesty's Privy Councillors for Canada, member of parliament for twenty-three years, leader of his party in the House of Commons for eighteen years and now its honorary president, a man of humane and generous mind, in whom the rival claims of individual freedom and social equality have sustained a long and fruitful tension, rewarded from time to time with glimpses on ways to reconcile them, where he worked with energy, courage, and devotion, as teacher, politician, and international statesman for the peace, order and good government of Canada, and for the dignity of humankind everywhere.

Joyce Hemlow, LL.D.—graduate of Queen's and Harvard Universities, recognized at home with fellowship in the Royal Society of Canada, adorned with fellowship and prizes worldwide, Greenshields Professor of English Literature at McGill University, critic, writer, editor, generous colleague, incisive and graceful teacher with a genial wit, who stirs excitement about learning equally among timid freshmen and world-weary graduate students, and whose searching scholarship has illuminated the works of Fanny Burney and the Burney family and brought the eighteenth century to life for twentieth-century readers.

Theoretical Chemistry At Queen's

Dr. R. L. McIntosh, head of the Department of Chemistry, proposes to establish a theoretical chemistry group and to offer theoretical chemistry at the graduate and undergraduate level by H. F. Shurvell

What is Theoretical Chemistry? Why at Queen's? These are questions asked of Dr. R. L. McIntosh, head of the Chemistry Department when he talks about establishing a theoretical chemistry group at Queen's. Dr. McIntosh would like his Department to be able to offer theoretical chemistry as a subject at both the graduate and undergraduate level. Many chemistry departments in Canada have one or more theoretical chemists but very few offer courses leading to graduate degrees in theoretical chemistry. This branch of chemistry now ranks in importance with the three long recognized fields of chemistry, namely organic, physical and inorganic.

Some of the areas covered by theoretical chemistry are: the quantitative interpretation of observed phenomena, prediction of physical quantities such as rates of chemical reactions, strengths of chemical bonds, energies of atoms and molecules. One important branch of theoretical chemistry is known as quantum chemistry. This involves calculation and prediction of properties of single atoms or molecules by means of quantum mechanics. Another area of theoretical interest is one which deals with the properties of large collections of atoms or molecules. This branch of theoretical chemistry makes use of statistical mechanics. Both quantum mechanics and statistical mechanics employ mathematical techniques which go well beyond the courses in calculus and differential equations that undergraduate students normally take.

Most chemists today devote themselves entirely either to experimental work or to theoretical work. The difference between the two types of endeavor is largely one of the techniques employed. The experimentalist works with laboratory apparatus; the theoretician works with mathematics.

Queen's University is an ideal location for a School of Theoretical Chemistry. There is an excellent mathematics department at Queen's and the computing facilities here are among the best in Canada. The Queen's Computing Centre has recently acquired an I.B.M. System 360 Computer. The proximity of the National Research Council in Ottawa is an additional reason for having a theoretical chemistry group at Queen's. The National Research Council has recently begun to expand its theoretical group and now employs some of the leading theoretical chemists in Canada. A summer workshop for theoretical chemistry is held annually and scientists from many countries as well as from all parts of Canada attend. It is expected that the Queen's theoretical chemistry group: staff, students and postdoctoral fellows, would participate in these gatherings.

The need for training in theoretical chemistry has long been recognized in the United States and in Europe where there are many important research institutes and schools of theoretical chemistry. What prerequisites are necessary for a student who wishes to do postgraduate work in theoretical chemistry? How does a student know that he wants to study theoretical chemistry?

The answer to the first question is that there are many roads available. The usual preparation for postgraduate work in theoretical chemistry would be through a chemistry honours course, consisting of a major in chemistry and minors in physics or mathematics. Alternative preparations might be an honours course in physics or mathematics with a chemistry minor, or a course in engineering chemistry such as the one offered at Queen's. For the answer to the second question we talked with David Schrum, a graduate student working towards his M.Sc. degree under the supervision of Dr. D. Peat. Mr. Schrum said that the student who finds unanswered questions resulting from his undergraduate course is a potential theoretical man. He has a type of mind that does not like the empirical approach and he finds it unsatisfactory to perform experiments that merely provide data.

A nucleus of a theoretical group has been formed by the addition of Drs. D. Peat and N.S. Snider to the staff. A third theoretical chemist, Dr. D. Hutchinson, will join the Department in September, 1967, to replace Dr. Peat who will be moving to the National Research Council in Ottawa. Both Drs. Snider and Hutchinson are young men in their late twenties and, in order to bring greater experience to the group, it is hoped to recruit a senior theoretical chemist in the near future.

AMONG THOSE PRESENT

Present at the spring meeting of the Executive of Directors of the Alumni Association are the following Directors, branch representatives and committee chairmen: Bruce Alexander, Toronto; W.W. Ashworth, Brockville; Dr. C. E. Ault, Ottawa; Dr. B. G. Ballard, Ottawa; Mrs. J. H. Bateman, Belleville; Miss F. Billings, Toronto; Dr. E. M. Boyd, Kingston; Mrs. R. W. Cameron, Valois, Que.; Mrs. K. Carter, Kingston; Vice-Principal H. G. Carr, Kingston; W. G. Cunningham, Kingston; Dr. Daub, Kingston; B. L. Farrand, Toronto; G. Geiger, Toronto; Dr. D. M. Jemmett, Kingston; E. G. A. Jorgensen, Toronto; Prof. J. Kennedy, Kingston; Dr. W. A. L. McDowell, Trenton; A. M. McMahon, Toronto; I. B. McRuer, Brockville; Miss Mary Alice McRuer, Kingston; D. L. Rigsby, Montreal, Que.; J. Robinson, New York, N.Y.; Ian Rogers, Toronto; Miss Evelina Thompson, Toronto; C. Toller, Ottawa; Mrs. C. M. Wiltshire, Ottawa.

and the Alumni Directors

Statements on University policy were given at the seventy-ninth semi-annual meeting of the Board of Directors of the Alumni Association on May 12 by A. Redmond, chief librarian, and R. J. Hand, Dean of the School of Business.

Mr. Redmond said that the major factor determining the course which the Queen's libraries are following and must follow in the future is the graduate and research program of the University. A survey has shown that while Queen's is one of five Ontario universities with library resources adequate to serve the undergraduates, no Ontario university library is adequate for its present graduate program. At the present time Queen's has approximately 500,000 volumes, double what it was a few years ago, but short of adequacy by nearly three-quarters of a million volumes.

Dean Hand said it was impossible to predict the problems that would confront the business world of ten years hence and more. If the changes that lie ahead are as dramatic as those which have taken place within the last half century, then business forecasts must be sketchy indeed. What is indicated for a young man planning to enter business management is a broad education and stimulation of intellectual capacity. Experience still remains the most important factor, but with a business education a young man can arrive at an important stage of management in ten years perhaps instead of fifteen.

Dr. B. G. Ballard, president of the Alumni Association, served as chairman. The Board:

- Recommended for the consideration of the Board of Trustees that the new mathematics building be named in honour of Nathan F. Dupuis, B.A. 1866, M.A. 1868, "a man of many interests and skills, matchless teacher of mathematics with a great love for astronomy," and who might be regarded as the founder of the Faculty of Applied Science at Queen's.

- Agreed on an advertising policy for the Review: "No advertising shall be carried which is undignified, misleading, or untruthful. No advertising shall be presented by the advertiser as an official announcement of the University or of a University organization unless it is indeed so. At all times the advertising shall conform with good taste and be in character with a University publication."

- Reserved decision on a request to re-allocate the Alumni Fund Capital of $21,000, placed in trust with the University in 1950, to the capitalization of a new consolidated awards fund.

- Authorized the Advisory Committee to make a study of the request of Medical alumni representatives to form a separate organization within the framework of the Alumni Association.

- Heard that Alumni Fund givings at the end of April, 1967, were $34,837 as compared with $26,934 at the same stage in 1966.

- Heard Mrs. R. W. Cameron report on behalf of the Alumnae Association that the branches had again been active in raising funds for furnishings in the residences.

EXPO '67, Canada's World Exhibition, is a resounding success, judged from any point of view. It is a spectacular, colourful phantasmagoria that has inspired laudatory comments from all over the world. The scope of Expo is so sweeping in concept that one cannot help but marvel at the planning and the administration that makes it operate as smoothly and efficiently as it does.

One of the top men behind the scenes, in fact third man on the administrative totem pole, is Andrew G. Kniewasser, Expo's general manager. Mr. Kniewasser, a member of the Class of Arts '48, has had to combine a knowledge of what is required to get the fair opened in record time, particularly in terms of budget, and the art of coping with political barriers indigenous to an international venture of this nature.

Mr. Kniewasser came to Expo with a record of achievement of increasingly important tasks for the Federal Department of Trade and Commerce, the Defence Production Department, and then abroad. Trained in economics he has served as trade commissioner in Athens, Beirut, Cairo, as commercial secretary in Caracas, area trade officer for

AT THE BRANCHES

The Ottawa alumnae had a Centennial party in June at the home of Mrs. Harvey I. Marshall, and most of the sixty guests attended in costume. The programme included an address by Dr. Charlotte Whitton, a display of Canadiana, a group singing Canadian ballads, and a menu starting out with Canadian cocktails (maple syrup base), and all Canadian hors d'oeuvres — Arctic char, buffalo, whale, fiddleheads. So successful were the dishes that thought is being given to mimeographed distribution of the recipes.

F. L. Bartlett

Frederick L. Bartlett, head of the School of Physical and Health Education at Queen's since its inception in 1947 until his retirement in 1965, died suddenly in Toronto, Ont., May 5. Mr. Bartlett, who had been three-times chairman of the Board of Education for the City of Kingston, was attending a meeting of the Ontario School Trustees Council when he became ill. He returned to his hotel room where he collapsed and died.

Mr. Bartlett had a long career in the field of education including terms as president of the Ontario Urban and Rural Trustees Association, chairman of the Ontario School Trustees Council and the Ontario Curriculum Institute and as director of the physical and health education branch of the Ontario Department of Education. He was a member of the Board of Governors for the new Ontario Institute for Studies in Education.

"Fred Bartlett held high the ideal of a sound mind in a sound body. He was a public spirited citizen and wise leader in many sides of education at all levels, loved and respected for his integrity and whole-hearted commitment to his work." — Dr. J. A. Corry, Principal of Queen's.

"He was a tower of strength both to the Board and to trustees councils right across this Dominion." — A. C. S. Ritter, Director of Education for Kingston.

"The Board of Education for the City of Kingston records its deep sense of loss in the sudden death of F. L. Bartlett, whose discerning judgment and encyclopedic knowledge, far-ranging interest and remarkable competence contributed light and substance to the deliberations of this Board and greatly benefitted students and teachers in this city and across this province." — Rev. Dr. A. M. Laverty, University Chaplain.

Surviving are wife, the former Dorothy Ackerman, a daughter Rosemary, Arts and P.H.E. '52, and a son David.

A time for cheering . . .
 A time for thought . . .
 A time for remembering and looking forward, too.

At Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, Canada's Centennial year has a double meaning—our bank was also founded in 1867.

This year is a time of reflective pride for all Canadians. A time for looking back to the great moments of our past. But it should be a time for us all to look forward, too—a pause before a new beginning.

On groundwork laid one hundred years ago we at the Commerce, like all Canadians, will build still more — achieving a still greater century in the years to come.

ONTARIO NORMAL COLLEGE 1906-07

This picture was sent in by Mrs. W. G. Benton (Maude McKenzie), 868 West 62nd Ave., Vancouver 14, B.C. Mrs. Benton said she would be interested in hearing from any of her old classmates.

The Alumni Office is always interested in such mementoes of the past as photographs, yearbooks, and other memorabilia, and not necessarily of venerable vintage as the above. You are urged to alert the Alumni Office when you want to dispose of such items — they are welcomed for the University archives, and ultimately it is hoped to have a permanent place for display purposes.

During the past few months a number of interesting items have been received from Mrs. C. K. Rush, Miss Helen McRae, Don C. Nickle, C. G. Harford, Miss Margaret Fraser, R. T. Hodgson, Mrs. Watson Sellar, Charles Clay, Dr. T. S. Webster, Miss Diana Blake, J. Grant MacDonald, C. S. Gibson, D. M. Kilpatrick, Mrs. D. L. G. McKay, Clark G. Walton, J. M. # University Archives - The Art Of Discovering Hidden Treasures

A LETTER IN A TRASH BIN accidentally exposed to view, family papers which have arrived at the end of a family line, in danger of being thrown out with the rubbish, documents mouldering in an attic, forgotten and uncherished, these are a few of the sources from which archives are built, judging from the experience at Queen's.

A few years ago the late M. C. Tillotson, Secretary of the University, rescued an early letter of Egerton Ryerson from a refuse bin at the rear of an apartment building. Thanks to his curiosity and acumen the framed holograph letter was salvaged in time and is now a valued possession in the Douglas Library.

Painstaking care over a long period of time, rather than happy accident, however, is largely accountable for the fact that the University boasts archives of impressive proportions. The Canadian manuscript collection has grown to the point where, for variety and interest, it is regarded as probably the leading archives department of any Canadian academic library. Such manuscripts are rarely come by happenstance, of course, but through the good offices of alumni and friends and well-wishers, and often only after prolonged and diplomatic negotiations.

Part of the success in this area may be traced to the fact that Queen's was one of the first Canadian universities to appoint a full-time archivist. Members of the History Department have taken keen interest in the archives and have served as bird dogs with an enthusiasm which reflects their natural and legitimate concern. And the Library has built up over the years a solid cadre of friends off as well as on campus who salvage documents of historic interest in a wide variety of places, or who persuade people with no connection with the University to deposit or loan their treasures to Queen's.

The archives fall into three main areas: 1) Queen's University papers. 2) local history. 3) manuscripts, political papers, and national history.

The archives collection is as old as the University for it may be said to have begun with the Royal Charter, a parchment document which cost the imposing sum of £700, almost bankrupting the infant college before it opened. In the early days there was barely enough money to buy the most necessary books for the college library let alone to invest in historical manuscripts. As H. P. Guy, librarian 1947-66, and now a member of the English Department and editor of the Queen's Quarterly, points out, the founding fathers, however, were fully conscious of the fact that their own records in planning and establishing the college were of historic importance. These they garnered and kept intact for posterity.

The first gift to Queen's other than money was in the form of books and was made before the institution had opened its doors. On July 1840, James Mitchell sent seven books to the fledgling university, including such items as a first Greek lexicon, the Vulgate, a Greek testament, a French New Testament of 1664, and some classics, Greek and Latin, above.

Today, calendared and indexed, they not only tell the history of the founding of Queen's, but reveal much of importance concerning the relations of Church and State in the early development of the province.

To the Queen's archives were added the records of the Presbyterian Synod of Canada in connection with the Church of Scotland. These, too, have been classified and indexed and used by research historians. Of even wider interest for the social historian are the nineteen volumes of manuscript journals kept by Rev. William Bell, the first Presbyterian minister of Perth, fifty miles north of Kingston.

Prominent and notable are the papers of George Monro Grant, Principal 1877-1902, some originals, some microfilms, and all of them interesting and illuminating. Dr. Grant found Queen's a small college struggling to keep alive; he left it a university firmly established with a tradition and sound scholarship. In between he laboured as the greatest campaigner for funds in the history of the institution, and his papers reveal the tremendous problems with which he had to cope.

In one letter under date of December 30, 1878, he wrote: . . .

The Principal has to collect the money, be responsible for its investment, economize so that he is thought a skinflint, be conversant with everything connected with the University, be a church politician in an Assembly where two thirds are secretly hostile to Queen's & do all the work of a regular professor in addition. I don't wonder that there have been half a dozen Principals in thirty-six years. However, I don't regret for one moment having come. I see clearly now that it was my duty, and if God spares me, & gives me health, work can be done here that could not be done from any pulpit in Canada . . .

The recent suggestion that there be a consolidation of all universities in Ontario was a revival of one of the problems confronting Grant. In a letter dated January 15, 1880, he wrote: . . .

Poor Queen's! She needs to make a brave fight. Here are those narrow C[anada] P[resbyterians] trying to run us off the rails by getting or trying to get the Church to establish a new Univ. to confer Degrees in Divinity. And the Toronto men are plotting to hedge us round with restrictions if we don't agree to Consolidation. What is your opinion of Univ. Consolidation for Ont.? The more I think of it the less I like it. But we keep brave in appearance & make the best possible show . . .

In another letter, dated August 26, 1886, he wrote:

. . . My ambition for Queen's is to make it a place where men will develop character. Better have 50 students in earnest than 500 nominal students. In all things, "multum non multa". If we succeed, it will be a training school not for missionaries only, but for men in every department of life . . .

The University might well be expected to be an authority on its own history. It is also a natural custodian of all that pertains to local history, which provides at least some of the bricks needed to build provincial and national history, as well as serving as a contribution to pride of place, the very foundation of civic spirit. In this area the Douglas Library has measured up well to its responsibility to preserve the records such as histories of cities, towns, and villages, the proceedings of the local historical societies, histories of churches, schools, regiments, businesses, families, prominent citizens, societies, hospitals, and other institutions, conservation reports, directories, souvenirs, government publications, manuscripts, pictures, newspaper scrapbooks, and the like.

The Queen's University collection is impressive and has been assembled from many sources. The late Lorne Pierce, editor of The Ryerson Press, and Mr. M. J. Pierce, both graduates of Queen's, were travelling by car through Leeds and Grenville looking at old stone houses. One particularly fine house not far from Brockville so attracted their attention that they stopped and knocked at the door to ask if they might see the house from within. The owner, Dr. Jones, was a charming host, and they soon found they had many interests in common. The house had been built by his ancestor, Isaac Solomon Jones, whose papers he proceeded to show Dr. Pierce.

What would happen to these papers? Dr. Jones admitted his own children were not interested. He supposed they should go to some library or archive. Would he consider giving them to Queen's? He would indeed if Dr. Pierce would take them with him.

Mr. Gundy reports that Mr. Fred Landon, of Watertown, N.Y., a man in his late eighties came to his office about fifteen years ago with some family papers and other records for which he was seeking a safe depository. The Librarian showed him other United Empire Loyalist papers in the archives, which inspired him to bring in a treasure trove of Landon family papers, including letters, militia rolls, and other documents.

In appreciation Mr. Landon was taken to visit some of his relatives near Landon Bay, about twenty miles east of Kingston, and to see some of the Landon gravestones in the old burying ground. He did a few years later, well content that his family records were in safe-keeping.

From the late Dr. J. A. Gray the Library purchased the Colonel James Parrot Papers, another group of U.E. Loyalist records from Ernesttown district. Among these was an old-time recipe for "mock-apple pie," a recipe which puzzled Mr. Gundy, as it seemed to lack any thickening ingredient.

"When I gave a radio broadcast on the Parrot Papers," says Mr. Gundy, "I mentioned the recipe and said that it seemed to me more like a drink than a pie! But a listener in Gananoque wrote to me to say that it was exactly the same recipe her old housekeeper had used and she assured me it was indeed a pie! Had it not been for the fact she was recovering from an accident and so could not move about she would have baked me a mock-apple pie to prove the recipe's accuracy."

Few Canadian families have contributed more to the public and professional life of Canada than that of Richard Cartwright Jr., one of the first United Empire Loyalists to settle in Kingston. He was clearly the foremost in influence, becoming a member of the first Land Board, a Justice of the Peace, a Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, and a member of Simcoe's first Legislative Council of Upper Canada. Patron of John Strachan who came out from Scotland to become tutor to his children, Cartwright was in large measure responsible for weaning the future Bishop of Toronto from his native Presbyterianism. The Library contains not only papers of the Hon. Richard Cartwright Jr. — letter books, ledgers, day books, and memoranda — but of Hon. John Solomon Cartwright, the Hon. J. S. Cartwright, and Sir Richard John Cartwright also.

Papers of other U. E. Loyalist and emigrant families in Eastern Ontario include those of Mullett, Baker, McDonald, Stone, Kirby, McCauley, McGuin, Mawat, Treadwell, Tett, Morris, Stevenson, Craine, and McLean. These provide a rich source of information on the life and mores of the times.

The Calvin family, so many members of which attended Queen's, are well represented in the papers of the Calvin Company Ltd., with letter-books, ledgers and other documents of the lumber and ship-building firm which operated on Garden Island, just outside the Kingston harbour, from 1837 to 1913. The story of the raft-building and other operations of the Calvin Company forms a romantic chapter in the history of Kingston and the St. Lawrence River.

At the national level the prize adornment is the Lorne Pierce Collection of Canadiana, a joint project of Dr. and Mrs. Lorne Pierce. After the death of his wife in 1954, Dr. Pierce established an endowment known as the Edith Chubb Pierce Trust, the interest on which was to be used to augment the collection in perpetuity.

Dr. Pierce began sending books to the library in the early 1920's and made a substantial gift of almost one thousand items in 1925, shortly after the Douglas Library was opened. The collection was at first housed in two presses in the Treasure Room, and when it outgrew this space it was transferred to a room on the second floor which became "the Lorne Pierce Room." Before long all the shelf-space was filled and when the large collection of Bliss Carman manuscripts arrived in 1945 there was no adequate place to store them. Temporary measures after temporary measure was employed to cope with the problem and ultimately four rooms were transformed into one in order to provide adequate quarters.

In addition to Bliss Carman, such Canadian poets as Marjorie Pickthill

William Wilfred Campbell, and Charles D. Roberts are well represented and the total list is impressive in its scope. C. Kyte, librarian at Queen's 1928-47, wrote in the introduction to Lorne Pierce's A Catalogue of Canadian Manuscripts, listing the manuscripts in the Lorne Pierce Canadiana Collection, and published in 1946:

Here are "the first notes of a national choir of Song;" here are gathered most of the essentials for those who, in the next fifty years, will ask what were Canada's poetic nurslings of the nineteenth century. Few Canadian libraries can offer such a display of Campbell, Carman, Pickthall, and Roberts manuscript material. It is the garnered fruit of enduring friendship; it is, above all, the justification of a votary for his devotion to an ideal.

As the editor of Ryerson Press, Dr. Pierce came in close contact with all Canadian men and women of letters, and he was a constant source of inspiration for struggling young writers. He was a stalwart champion and a constructive critic. A voluminous letter writer and a prolific author of books, brochures, biographies, monographs, learned papers, academic lectures and addresses, his own material is an integral and valuable part of the collection.

Queen's has been signally fortunate in securing the personal library of nearly four thousand volumes, and the private papers of John Buchan, 1st Baron Tweedsmuir, Governor-General of Canada, 1935-1940. Through the good offices of L. W. Brockington, Rector of Queen's 1947-66, a close friend of the Tweedsmuir family, this memorial collection was purchased for the Douglas Library by Colonel and Mrs. R. S. McLoughlin, long-time benefactors of the University and the Library.

Many of the books in the collection contain marginalia and other annotations in Buchan's handwriting; presentation volumes, of which there are many, frequently contain autographed letters from the authors. Of the first importance are twenty-eight manuscript volumes uniformly bound of some of Buchan's major works. These are all holographs with the exception of two or three typescripts. All but four have inscriptions in Buchan's hand indicating the date at which the work was begun, the place or places it was written and the date of completion.

Prominent among the political papers are those of Hon. Norman Rogers, marking an association with Queen's that began in 1929, the year in which he resigned as secretary to Prime Minister Mackenzie King to join the Department of Political and Economic Science at Queen's, until his death in 1939, when he died in an air accident while Minister of National Defence. These papers came to Queen's through Prof. F. W. Gibson, now Vice-Principal (Academic), of the History Department.

In addition to draft and revised versions of speeches and articles on a wide range of political, economic and constitutional questions, departmental papers, memoranda, engagement diaries and press clippings, the Rogers Papers contain about 1,700 letters received and sent by Norman Rogers between 1906 and 1940, the bulk of these dating from the period 1930-35. Most notable are some ninety letters and telegrams from Mackenzie King, witnessing to the writer's almost paternal yet deferential regard for the man who was widely considered to be his political heir apparent.

The list of political papers in the archives at Queen's is impressive. Included are the papers of such personages as Hon. Herbert A. Bruce, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario; Hon. T. A. Crerar, federal cabinet minister; Alexander Grant Dexter, journalist; Hon. Charles Avery Dunning, federal cabinet minister; Victor Alexander Bruce Elgin, ninth Earl, secretary of state for the Colonies;

Sir Sandford Fleming, railway builder; Donald Gordon, president of the C.N.R. and head of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board; Norman Platt Lambert, journalist, and secretary to the Canadian Council of Agriculture; Sir Wilfred Laurier, Prime Minister of Canada; Dr. J. J. McCann, federal cabinet minister; Hon. J. M. Macdonnell, federal cabinet minister; Hon. Alexander Mackenzie, Prime Minister of Canada; Hon. Walter G. Mitchell, Quebec cabinet minister; Hon. C. G. Power, federal cabinet minister; B. K. Sandwell, author and journalist; Hon. D. M. Sutherland, federal cabinet minister.

The complete list ranges from the correspondence and other papers Baron Edward William Macleay Gri Altrincham, British journalist and parliamentarian, to the correspondence and other documents of Charles Platt Treawell, sheriff of Prescott and Russell Counties in the mid-1800's. In between is a wide range of correspondence, letters, books, ledgers, day books, memoranda, family papers, for many other officials in county, provincial and federal administration.

The influence of such members of staff as Professor Gibson is not limited to their own efforts. A history student who lived in Quebec spoke about having been shown by an elderly family friend, Mrs. Hubbard, the original diary of Chief Justice Sir William Smith. On Mr. Gibson's suggestion a letter was written by Mr. Gundy to Mrs. Hubbard to enquire whether she would place the historical volume in the custody of Queen's. A long correspondence followed. She had given some papers to the Quebec provincial archives on loan and was not satisfied with the arrangement. An agreement was drawn up with the assistance of the Law Faculty making Queen's custodian of the diary although Mrs. Hubbard retained ownership during her lifetime. The diary has since been published by the Champlain Society, the editor, P. L. S. F. Upton having spent much time in the Douglas Library deciphering the text.

The archives owes much to the many friends, patrons, and alumni who have helped to build up the Library over the years, of which only a few examples have been noted, and it is devoutly to be hoped that this happy relationship will continue. Gifts are welcomed whether they are made outright, on loan, for a limited term, or whatever. Any arrangement will work to the advantage of the library, the donor, the scholar, the historian and the research worker.

The Queen's Newman Club Marks Its Fiftieth Anniversary

Plans are under way to celebrate the event on Reunion Weekend — the Club at Queen's was the second in Canada

by Rt. Rev. J. G. Hanley

Queen's Newman Club will observe the fiftieth anniversary of its establishment on October 25. Plans are under way to mark the event on Reunion Weekend.

When it was founded on October 25, 1917, it was the second Club in Canada. The Newman movement began at the University of Pennsylvania in 1893, the first such establishment in Canada came in 1913, at the University of Toronto.

There were fifty-nine Catholic students at Queen's in the year 1917-18, and about thirty of them became members when the Newman Club was set up. The late Dr. Harry Fleming, M.P. for Humboldt, Sask., became the first president, and W. J. Coyle, retired assistant general manager of the Kingston Whig-Standard, was the first secretary.

Because of the small numbers, the Club had a struggling existence in its earlier years, and would not have survived but for the generous help of a few devoted friends, especially the late Dr. William Gibson, Dr. Fergus J. O'Connor, Sr. and Miss Florence O'Donnell.

For the first few years the Knights of Columbus generously gave the student group the use of their clubrooms for meetings. Then came the era of student Masses in St. James Chapel, adjoining St. Mary's Cathedral, followed by Communion breakfasts in St. Mary's Hall on Wellington Street, later in St. Joseph's Hall at Hotel Dieu Hospital, and in the Hotel Dieu cafeteria.

Our alumni will recall some of the highlights of the intervening years. Older members will recall the public lecture by Armand Lavergne in March, 1921, with repercussions that were interesting. Some will remember the mid-1930's, when Ed. Barnabe and Johnny Wing were leading the Golden Gaels to a football championship with fourteen players. Others will remember the war years when students had little time for any extra-curricular activities, when Archie Foley and Jacqueline Cote were president and vice-president for two years, and when the late General A. G. L. McNaughton spoke to the Club on the weekend when he was honored by the University.

Then there were those glorious post-war years when we had the great influx of veteran students, when the intellectual program of the Club made its great advance, with discussion groups going on in several alumni homes on the same evenings on Marriage Preparation, Labour Relations, Scholastic Philosophy, International Affairs, and other topics. Those were also the years of the Newman Clubs shows, inaugurated by Gelin-do De Ré.

Because of the persistent imbalance of men and women among Queen's students the student nurses at Hotel Dieu Hospital were invited to become members of the Club in 1929. Although the primary motive for inviting them was social, they proved an invaluable intellectual asset to the Club in succeeding years.

When the Royal Military College re-opened after World War II the Catholic cadets sought admission to the Club and were welcomed. Formed in a tradition of intellectual discipline, they brought a new dimension to the Newman operation.

As far back as 1922 we find this notation in the minutes of a Club meeting: "A committee was appointed to investigate the possibilities of acquiring a clubhouse." At the next meeting the committee reported that such a project was not feasible at that time. This was repeated periodically. Then in 1948 a committee of alumni and students made a serious move in this direction. But it was not until 1958, when the Archdiocese made the property at 130 Johnson Street available, that Newman Club had a home of its own. However, this was too far from the campus to be useful. In 1960 the Archdiocese acquired the property at 164 University Avenue, which is the House shown in the accompanying photograph. Ideally located, it is a thriving centre of activity. It provides daily Mass for a limited number of students, and a meeting place for study and social groups. Because it cannot accommodate the crowd for Sunday Mass, one Mass is celebrated each Sunday in Dunning Hall on campus, and an afternoon Mass in the House chapel. There are plans for expansion of the facilities as soon as this is possible.

In 1945 Newman Club Alumni was established to aid the undergraduate Club in its activities and perform similar services for graduates in the area. In 1959 the Alumni Club was incorporated with the Government of Ontario. Then in 1966 a permanent Newman Foundation was set up, with a Board of Directors, to administer the Newman operation with particular reference to the House. The chairman of the Board is Gelin-do De Ré.

Newman Club has had seven chaplains during its fifty years: Rev. Dr. D. J. Casey, 1917-24; Rev. J. G. McCann, 1924-27; Rev. G. T. Martin, 1927-34; Rev. T. E. Mooney, 1934-41; (Rt) Rev. J. G. Hanley, 1941-58; Rev. E. J. Keyes; 1958-67; and the newly appointed Rev. R. C. Vickers.

Newman Club has always enjoyed the enthusiastic support of Queen's administration. Our alumni will recall that the annual visit of the Principal to the opening Communion breakfast of the year, and his enthusiastic encouragement to students "to be active in their particular religious faith," as the policy of the University. The University has always been extremely generous in providing lists of Catholic students, and in making facilities available for Club activities. The present use of Dunning Hall is only the latest in a long line of helps which we have had from Queen's.

Queen's Newman Club was one of the founding members of the Canadian Newman Federation, and has taken an active part in the Newman movement on a national basis. It has been host to the national convention three times, in 1943, 1949 and 1962.

The tenor of the Newman apostolate has changed greatly over these fifty years. In the early stages its main objective was social. But this was all changed in the war and postwar years, when the emphasis shifted to the intellectual and spiritual, and that is where it is focussed at present.

There are more than 600 Catholic students at Queen's now, and the challenge to Newman Club is growing with the numbers. The changes which have been taking place in the Church through the past ten years have opened up new avenues for student search and involvement. The pattern of the Newman operation has to change and expand to meet the challenge. An expansion of its physical facilities will be required and will be provided as soon as possible. On the part of the students it will require the same measure of dedicated participation which has characterized the first fifty years' development.

The end run, with blocking. This well-executed play was one of the reasons why Queen's was able to win the Intercollegiate championship last year. Don Bayne (18) pitches out to Jam Johnston (23) behind the blocking of Brian Parnega (51) Doug Cowan (22), Jim Tait (29)

FOOTBALL 1967

The fortunes of the Queen's football team in recent years have improved to the point where the fans expect success and are somewhat taken aback when the Gaels are not victorious. Since 1960 Queen's have won thirty games as against eleven losses in league competition and have amassed four championships. Even last year when the Gaels won the title — and the rating of No. 1 in the nation — the supporters were agreeably surprised but not stunned by developments.

This year the Gaels must be regarded as the team to beat. They have lost some key players, including three all-stars, but the prospects are still bright.

That master of understatement, Head Coach Frank Tindall, to whom this heady success is gratifying after so many years of heavy going, and who is now heading into his twenty-first season, says "It will be difficult to replace the excellent players who are graduating, but among the forty returnees we retain the nucleus of another good team."

Co-captains Bayne Norrie and Don Bayne form an impressive nucleus themselves. Norrie, now in his final year of the Master of Business Administration course, has played for five years, formerly as a star on offence, but last year he switched to defence and won the John Evans Memorial Trophy. In Don Bayne's second-year Law, who took over the quarterback slot last year after three years as standby to Cal Connor, Queen's had the Omega Trophy winner as the most valuable player in the league.

Add to this accomplished duo such stars as Jamie Johnston, Guy Potvin, and Carl Di Giacomo, backed up by a eager a group as Coach Tindall has ever had in camp, and there is reason for optimism. There is no money-back guarantee that the championship flag will continue to fly in Richardson Stadium, of course, but it does mean that Toronto, Western, and McGill will have to show a lot of hustle and ability to beat out the Gaels.

Of utmost importance in Coach Tindall's plans are the return of the Linebacker Hal McCarney and Backfield Guard Al Lenard. These three form a triumvirate that has been a leading factor in the success story of the Golden Gaels. Go Gheill!

Entrance Awards of $200 each have been established in honour of the University's 125th anniversary. The scholarships will be given to students entering in September with 80 per cent or better on Grade 13 examinations written for the first time in May, 1967. The purpose is to give able students recognition of scholarly effort and achievement. In 1967-68 the awards are being financed through the Reuben Wells Leonard Foundation.

Groundwork for a new health-sciences complex has been virtually completed, and the University is close to a settlement with the Ontario Government for the financing of its share of the cost. Latest estimates place the cost at between fifteen and sixteen million dollars.

The building, which may rise to thirteen storeys, is being planned for the north side of King Street, opposite the heating plant. It is expected the complex will be completed by 1971. The most important objective will be to increase the number of graduates in medicine and train them in conjunction with other health sciences personnel such as nurses, physical and occupational therapists, X-ray and laboratory technicians.

Approximately $4,566,000 will be spent on new psychology and mathematics buildings and it is expected that tender will be called and contracts let before mid-September. The psychology building will rise on the present location of the Jock Harty Arena and the math building will be located on University Avenue next to Ellis Hall, and across from Grant Hall. It is hoped to replace the Arena with a new building in the same general area as the Gymnasium.

Bequests and gifts, with value probably in excess of $750,000, were recently made to Queen's. The late D. I. McLeod, Arts '08, and a member of the Board of Trustees from 1923 to 1965, has left the University a residuary bequest which is estimated at several hundred thousand dollars. Most of this amount has been earmarked for scholarships or fellowships for students in the School of Business. A bequest of $273,038 came from the estate of Adiel D. Steacy of Brockville, Ont., and provides for the establishment of scholarships in medicine. Gifts include a grant of $25,000 from the Charles E. Merrill Trust, a number of books from the estate of the late Dr. Leonard W. Brockington, and $68,250 from the Friends of Queen's Inc., in New York.

A collection of more than 700 volumes on criminology and penology has been donated to the Law Library by J. A. Edmison, Q.C., Ottawa, Ont., one-time

Dr. H. W. Curran, director of extension, and secretary Sandra Boucher, among others, were dressed in 1867 period costumes for the registration of Summer School and are shown meeting student Paul Sajben. More than 1400 were enrolled in credit courses, a new record, and in addition there were nearly another 1300 in teacher training and the School of English.

Assistant to the Principal and now a member of the National Parole Board. The collection includes a number of government documents not readily obtainable elsewhere, if at all, and the works of John Howard and works relating to his life, as well as reports and comments dealing with notorious crimes and famous criminal trials, stories by prisoners of their imprisonment, and works devoted to reform of penal laws and administration.

F. D. Harkness has been re-elected as chairman of the University's Board of Trustees. Dr. W. A. Mackintosh has been re-elected as one of the two vice-chairmen and J. D. Gibson, Toronto, Ont., succeeds W. N. McLeod as the other vice-chairman.

Other persons elected to the Board were: by the graduates for three-year terms, Dr. Pauline Jewett, Ottawa, Ont., and S. Robert Blair, Calgary Alta.; by the benefactors for four-year terms, H. I. Marshall, Ottawa, Ont., and William V. Moore, Toronto, Ont.; by the University Council for three-year terms, Judge Walter Little, Parry Sound, Ont., and J. A. Richardson, Winnipeg, Man.; by the Board of Trustees for four-year terms, R. G. Beck, Montreal, Que.; A. H. Lemmon, Toronto, Ont., and R. W. Southam, Ottawa, Ont.; by the Board of Trustees for a three-year term, J. R. Gordon, New York, N.Y.

The Board has made two one-year appointments to fill unexpired terms: Dr. G. Malcolm Brown, Ottawa, Ont.; and K. R. MacGregor, Waterloo, Ont. Rev. George Brown of Kingston, Ont., has been re-appointed to a one-year term as the representative of the Queen's Theological College. Another recent addition is R. D. Armstrong, Toronto, Ont., who has been appointed by the Trustees.

Sister Eileen Scott, of Marionopolis College, Montreal, spoke on "Some Aspects of Old Montreal" at the annual meeting of the Alumnae Assoc.

ALUMNAE ANNUAL MEETING Held in Montreal

• In recognition of Canada's centennial year the women of Queen's chose Montreal's Expo site as the locale for their annual meeting on May 27.

More than two hundred came to renew their old Queen's ties and to learn of the activities of their Alma Mater. Some were recent graduates, and some were not so recent. While the majority were from Ontario and Quebec, it was interesting to find in the permanent guest book one from Green Oak, N.S., another from Tucson, Arizona, and another from as far west as Calgary, Alta.

The Alumnae started to gather in the Hospitality Pavilion around 10.30 a.m. Lunch was served there, and a thoroughly delightful speaker, Sister Eileen Scott, of Marionopolis College, Montreal, spoke on "Some Aspects of Old Montreal."

At the annual meeting, it was moved that the Queen's Alumnae discontinue their affiliation with the National Council of Women (the Association is already represented through the Canadian Federation of University Women). This motion was passed unanimously.

In connection with the Marty Scholarship it was proposed to drop the stipulation that a candidate must pursue his graduate studies outside Canada. This motion is to be referred to the branch for their consideration.

After Dean Beatrice Bryce's report on the women students at Queen's many members expressed regret over the demise of the Levana Society. Dr. Charlotte Whitton volunteered to prepare an appropriate brochure on the history of the Levana Society and this offer was accepted amid great applause.

A motion to ensure representation of the Alumnae on the Board of Trustees was the subject of a spirited discussion. Unfortunately time ran out and the matter could not be fully explored because the Pavilion had to be vacated at 4 o'clock. As the Expo staff converged on the meeting it was announced that next year the annual meeting will be held in Kingston.

ALUMNI REVIEW September-October, 1967

more to CGE than most folks
see...

For instance, even as you scan this message, research and development teams serving our 22 CGE plants are seeking, not only to improve our existing products but are exploring many fields of potential promise. Some of these areas of interest are as dissimilar as chemical and metallurgical, hydraulics and electronics, heat transfer and aerodynamics to mention just a few.

Why such diversification? Because at Canadian General Electric we believe in making major risk investments in product fields that show future promise. These investments are based on the conviction that leadership in industry is achieved by innovation in the development and application of new products and technology more than by merely attempting to get a larger share of the market for existing products ... and why you are sure of more of the best now, and in the future.

CANADIAN GENERAL ELECTRIC

we have these fields of activity to serve you...Atomic Power...Chemical
...Metallurgical...Construction and Power Distribution...Electronics...Defence Products...Housewares
and Home Entertainment...Industrial Apparatus...Information Systems...Lamps...Major Appliances
...Power Generation and Industrial Machinery.

When you're a pioneer starting your 150th year of activity you have plenty to remember. Especially when you've made financial history, like laying the cornerstone of this country's banking system—fifty years before Confederation. At this time we could be looking back on a long record of achievement. Instead, we're looking ahead—well ahead. Canada's First Bank may be an old-timer but it has the youngest outlook in banking.

The City Park, with its very fine statue to Sir John A. Macdonald, has been a popular rendezvous for generations of Queen's students. The plaque on the statue reads:

Sir John Alexander Macdonald
1815 - 1891

First elected from Kingston in the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Canada in 1844, he was for forty-seven years the leading figure in the public life of his country. One of the Fathers of Confederation, he became the first Prime Minister of Canada and held the office 1867-73, 1878-91. Under his leadership the new Dominion was extended from sea to sea by incorporation of the territories of the Hudson's Bay Company, British Columbia, and Prince Edward Island and linked together by construction of the Intercolonial and Canadian Pacific Railways.

On March 7, 1842, Queen's University opened in rented quarters, a frame house on Colborne Street, with an enrolment of twelve students, a staff of two, and a library of fifty-two books.

In 1967-68, Queen's has a registration of 5,792, a full-time teaching staff of 507 and a library of 544,060. There are now four faculties and two schools; the original Faculty of Arts and Science, the Faculty of Medicine (1854), the Faculty of Applied Science (School of Mining, 1893), the Faculty of Law (1957), the School of Business (1963), and the School of Graduate Studies (1963). There are also the Schools of Nursing and Physical Health Education (the latter a division of Arts and Science). The Duncan MacArthur College of Education is scheduled to open for classes in 1968.

Between these two extremes is a fascinating story of struggle and hardships and reverses which were overcome by men who firmly believed in the destiny of Queen's and her place in the academic sun. Queen's grew up with Canada and changed with the times. It is now one of the great universities of Canada with teaching and research in a wide range of subjects to meet expanding national needs.

ANNIVERSARY

Sir John A. Macdonald and Queen's

If ever a fledgling university needed a guide, counsellor and friend it was Queen's and in Sir John A. Macdonald there was that happy association. For a lifetime he gave freely of his time and his energies and to Principals Liddell, Machar, Cook, Leitch, Snodgrass and Grant he proved to be a staunch and loyal supporter.

In this, Canada's centennial year, the name of Sir John A. Macdonald takes on particular significance. Canada's first prime minister had an association with Queen's that began in his youth and continued until his death and he proved to be a highly influential friend in the life of the fledgling institution.

Macdonald isn't listed among the twenty-nine founders of Queen's, but he moved one resolution and seconded another in the preliminary planning which led to the founding of the College. It was he who advised the trustees to apply for grant of land in Kingston, and to purchase Archdeacon Stuart's house, Summerhill, along with six acres of property, which provided Queen's with a permanent home after years in rented quarters. He served as adviser and counsellor and friend in those precarious days when, burdened with financial woes, Queen's was waging a desperate fight for very existence. The early Principals, Presbyterian ministers all — Liddell, Machar, Cook, Leitch, Snodgrass, Grant — found nothing in Macdonald's reputation as a roisterer to keep them from seeking his help and guidance and he amply justified the confidence in him time after time after time.

His memory is kept alive at Queen's in many ways. Principal George Monro Grant thought of him as a founding father and when the commemorative trees were planted along Founders' Avenue, the roadway leading from the gate on Stuart Street to the front entrance of the Old Arts Building, one of them bore the name of Macdonald. The first full Professorship in Economics in Canada was the Sir John A. Macdonald Chair in Political Science at Queen's. The Law Building is proudly known as Sir John A. Macdonald Hall. The West Campus of the University has as one of its boundaries Sir John A. Macdonald Boulevard. An excellent statue, with the quotation, "A British subject I was born, a British subject I will die," stands in the City Park, on the fringe of the campus, and, over the years, in furtive forays, it has been visited by Queen's students who never seem to tire of festooning it with moose horns, underclothing, wearing apparel, banners, and whatever else may strike their fertile fancies.

When the official opening of Centennial Year in Kingston began January 11 — Sir John A. Macdonald's birthday — a special ceremony was held in Grant Hall. Dr. J. A. Corry, Principal, chaired the meeting, which was held for the students and staff of the University, selected students from the secondary and public schools of the city, and the public. It was an appropriate and well-earned tribute to a man who had done so much for the University.

In a thesis "John A. Macdonald and Kingston" written for his Master's degree in 1944, Dr. T. S. Webster, now Dean of Student Affairs at Queen's, devotes a chapter to Macdonald and the University. He says John A. Macdonald's interest in Queen's began with the beginning of the University, and ended only at the end of his life. In December, 1889, eighteen months before his death, he participated in the celebration of the University's fiftieth anniversary. During those fifty years his personal interest, his legal knowledge, and his political influence contributed to the development of Queen's.

On Wednesday evening, December 18, 1839, "a meeting was held in St. Andrew's Church, Kingston, on the subject of the proposed college to be erected in this town." A number of resolutions "were carried unanimously."

It was moved by Major Logie, seconded by John A. Macdonald, Esq., "That this meeting deeply regret the limited means afforded the youth of this country of acquiring a liberal education . . . and preparing . . . for the ministry in connection with the Church of Scotland." The young lawyer participated in the launching of at least one other motion.

Speaking at the semi-centennial celebration, the seventy-four year-old statesman referred to that early gathering. "I was modest then (laughter) modest as those young friends of mine in the gallery [a group of men students], and when I arose to move the resolution that was placed in my hands, and although I had prepared an eloquent oration, I was in such a mortal fright that I did not say a single word."* He gave the resolution to the chairman and sat down.

As with the young college, so with the medical faculty, writes Dean Webster. Macdonald was on hand at the beginning. At a meeting on July 20, 1853, the Board of Trustees of the College resolved to open faculties of law and medicine as soon as possible. On February 7, 1853, three professors — one of whom was James Williamson, Macdonald's future brother-in-law — were appointed as a committee to confer with medical men in order to establish a medical faculty. Apparently it was shortly after this date that a meeting was held at the home of Macdonald. The meeting was called by John A. and he "wrote with his own hand, invitations to all the medical men in the town," at the suggestion of Dr. John Robinson Dickson, who was to become the first professor of surgery at Queen's.

Sir John spoke of this meeting in the semi-centennial speech: "It was also a great pleasure to me subsequently to invite to my little drawing-room the medical men of the city, and at their head old Dr. Sampson, and settle the basis of the School of Medicine affiliated with the University."

* Queen's College Journal, January 15, 1890.

Four years later Dr. Stewart, treasurer of the Medical Faculty, asked Macdonald for a legal opinion on whether money granted by government for medical instruction was to be spent by the Medical Faculty or by the University Trustees. Macdonald answered: "In my opinion any grant to Queen's College whether for the Faculty of Medicine or . . . Law or Arts, is properly payable to the Trustees of that University and should be appropriated according to the intention of the grant, by the Trustees."

When a disagreement developed between the college trustees and the medical staff, the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Kingston was organized as a separate body. This corporation was established by an Act of 1866 promoted by the Attorney-General for Canada West, Hon. John A. Macdonald.

Shortly after Macdonald entered the Canadian Legislature in 1844 he assumed the role of political liaison officer for the college, a task which made claims on his time throughout his career, and which pressed upon him even in his busiest days, writes Dr. Webster. Petitions came in large numbers, and he arranged their presentation to the governor and to both houses; advice and information were frequently submitted by him to the University officers.

Three years after he entered the Legislature he became Receiver General, and launched a University Bill which would have given all the Upper Canada colleges a share in the government endowment, which previously had gone entirely to King's. This bill was lost.

When affiliation or confederation of all the colleges of Upper Canada was being considered in 1862, Macdonald was constantly informed of the moves being made by the authorities of Queen's. Dr. Leitch, the Principal, wrote to him on January 21, 1862, outlining and objecting to, a proposal made by the University of Toronto. "It is of great importance that the recognition of the Governor-in-Council be delayed." On February 13 Williamson sent him Leitch's proposals "for the settlement of the University Question." There was considerably more correspondence, and the plan came to nothing, but there is ample evidence that the advice and judgment of the Attorney General for Canada West were highly valued by the University.

In the seventies and eighties financial and administrative problems for the University arose from the reunion of the Presbyterian church in Canada. On many occasions Macdonald's advice was sought by Principal Snodgrass and Principal Grant and was freely given. The letters reveal the confidence that was placed in Sir John's judgment.

There were several occasions in which Macdonald was unable to give the university officers the help they desired, points out Dr. Webster. His usefulness to the college when in power is set in sharp relief by the troubles which arose when his influence was weak. When Baldwin headed the administration in 1849, when Macdonald left the provincial for the federal sphere, and when Mackenzie won the federal control in 1874, the College felt the loss of his political strength.

Shortly after Confederation, the Ontario government under the leadership of John Sandfield Macdonald included in its program of economy the cutting of the college grants. Sir John advised Principal Snodgrass to present a united front by the colleges in appealing to the Legislature. There is considerable correspondence on the theme of the proposed economy. Despite all his efforts the grant was stopped.

To Queen's Macdonald gave more than advice. In the list of contributors to the First Endowment Fund, 1839-44 appears the name MacDonald, J. A. — £25.0.0. This is likely a misspelling of the young lawyer's name for it is almost certain he would have made some contribution after attending the organization meeting. There is absolutely no doubt that after the stopping of the provincial grant in 1868, Sir John contributed in the second campaign for funds conducted by the College. On January 21, 1869 he wrote to Dr. Snodgrass that he wanted to be put down for $500, payable in four instalments. There is evidence that he also contributed to the third fund.

Through his efforts many useful gifts were directed to the University, including "The Civil Code as reported by the Codification Commissioners of Lower Canada" to the Queen's library, copies of Hansard, and other valuable documents.

The efforts of the great political leader were given recognition by the University in 1863. On April 30 of that year he received the Honorary Degree of LL.D. Apparently the custom was started in the 1862-63 session of electing a "Fellow" for each faculty, each year. John A. Macdonald was given this honour by the Law Faculty in 1864-65, and again in 1867 and 1869.

He received alumni support for appointment as Chancellor but nothing came of it. In 1877 Chancellor-elect Cook was "by no means sure that your council has done the right thing in electing me chancellor. If I could have written in time . . . I would have suggested Sir John Macdonald."

Dean Webster points out that it is interesting to note that in the business of keeping his constituency happy the politician did not forget the College. Sir John wrote to Williamson in 1878:

I wish you would do what you can for Power and Son, architects, who tender for the new college buildings. They are good architects and good Conservatives.

Sir John spoke at notable public gatherings sponsored by the University, on several occasions. When Principal Grant came to Queen's 1877 Macdonald attended the afternoon ceremonies of installation in Convocation Hall on December 15, and spoke at the evening meeting in the City Hall.

On April 30, 1875 he attended the Trustees' banquet in Convocation Hall. In the course of his reply to the toast to the House of Commons he referred to Queen's, and it was reported in the Journal as follows:

He . . . could remember the birth of Queen's College but he did not think he would follow it to its grave. . . . He would now sit down merely saying of the rest of his speech as Tony Lumpkins said of Dr. Drowsy's sermons — 'It could be deferred to another time' (Laughter and cheers).

At the afternoon session of the fiftieth anniversary celebration "The veteran chieftain, who was cheered again and again, stood smiling and bowing before the audience for several minutes, before the enthusiasm which his appearance called forth had subsided." He spoke again of his meetings in St. Andrew's and in his own home and he said:

I look forward with great hope to the future of the University. I stood at its cradle, and am proud to see such a healthy child. You are yet young, but are healthy, strong and vigorous, and can look forward with hope to years of strong vigorous manhood before you, in the future. Allow me to say again that I am pleased to have the opportunity of being here, and I am pleased to think that whatever I have done has been so kindly remembered by those, who, in their goodwill, valued it so much.

W. E. McNeill, one of the giant figures in Queen's history, once proclaimed that "though I am not a Queen's man born nor a Queen's man bred, yet when I die there's a Queen's man dead." This might well have served as an epitaph for Sir John A. Macdonald.

MARTY MEMORIAL

VALUED AT $2,700

Established by the Queen's University Alumnae Association in memory of Dr. Aletta Marty

Any woman graduate of Queen's University with a Master's degree or equivalent may hold this scholarship, which is awarded ordinarily for a year of graduate study either outside of Canada or at a Canadian university. If the winning candidate elects to study at a Canadian university, she must already have studied abroad for at least one year.

A committee chosen by the Alumnae Association makes the award. The scholarship may be awarded to the same person for a second year.

Conditions

Application forms may be obtained from the Registrar, Queen's University at Kingston. They must be returned to the Registrar by 1 February, 1968, with the following information:

1. List of universities attended, with dates and degree or degrees received, together with a transcript of work done at universities other than Queen's. A statement of examinations passed at Queen's need not be sent.
2. List of foreign languages which the candidate can read and/or speak.
3. Information about service given as reader, tutor or demonstrator during university course.
4. (a) Statement of interest and activities other than academic and professional work.
(b) Statement of any business or professional positions held.
5. List of publications (if any).
6. Name of university at which candidate proposes to study.
7. Outline of proposed plan of study.
8. Statement of other scholarship applications, if any.
9. Names and addresses of three persons from whom confidential information may be obtained about academic and personal qualifications. These persons must include two professors, one of whom is a professor under whom the candidate is presently studying or has recently studied. If the candidate has recently held employment related to her field of research, the third letter of reference should come from her employer. Otherwise she should ask a third professor who can vouch for the quality of her scholarship, to send a letter on her behalf.
10. The acceptance of the scholarship obligates the scholar to devote herself to study and research during the term of the award. The successful candidate must send to the Chairman two reports, the first at the middle point of her year of study, and the second at the conclusion of the year.
11. The first instalment of the scholarship, normally $1,700, is payable at the beginning of the programme of study. The second instalment of $1,000 is paid on the receipt of the first report.

THE MAPLE LEAF FOREVER

ALEXANDER MUIR

Con spirito

One hundred years ago a Toronto school teacher wrote what was destined to become a popular Canadian song, a hymn of patriotism, that is still in the public domain. The composer was Alexander Muir, a graduate of Queen's, and the song was "The Maple Leaf Forever."

Alexander Muir wrote the lyrics and melodies for many songs, but none became as well known as "The Maple Leaf". It was printed at the Methodist Book Room at his own expense, $30, and brought him in only $4 in sales. The song actually sold by the thousands, but it was not copyright, and others reaped the profit. Such was the nature of the man he never regretted the lack of financial gain.

A native of Lesmahagow, Lanarkshire, Scotland, where he was born on April 5, 1830, Alexander Muir was brought to Upper Canada at the age of three by his father, John Muir. The family settled in Scarboro Township, York County, and John Muir taught school until his death in 1865.

Alexander Muir went to Queen's, and graduated with his B.A. degree in 1851.

In 1853 he entered on his lifework as a schoolmaster. During his career he taught at Scarboro, Toronto, Newmarket, Beaverton, before returning to Toronto in 1885 as principal of Howard Park School. From there he went to Brock Avenue School, and in 1888 when Gladstone Avenue School opened, he became its principal and remained there until his death.

A staunch patriot, he carried to his grave a stiff left arm as the result of a wound he received in the Northwest Rebellion. He was with the Queen's Own Rifles of Toronto in fighting and defeating the Fenians at Ridgeway, in 1866.

The words and music of "The Maple Leaf Forever" were composed in 1867. There are two versions as to how it was inspired. One is that Alexander Muir, then in his thirty-seventh year, was strolling with a friend down a path that led to Lake Ontario. A maple leaf with the autumn colours fluttered down from the tree onto his coat. He tried to flick it away, but the leaf remained.

"You have been writing verses," said his friend. "Why not write a song about the maple leaf?"

Two hours afterwards the lines which have made the name of Alexander Muir famous were written. His wife suggested he should set them to music. He looked but could not find what he felt was required, so he composed the tune that is familiar to every Canadian.

Another version revolves around George Leslie, in charge of the postoffice where Alexander Muir used to drop by after school hours to look over the newspaper. One day just before Hallowe'en in 1867 Leslie called Muir's attention to an advertisement inserted by the Caledonian Society of Montreal which offered three prizes for the best Canadian patriotic song to be sung at the Hallowe'en rally. All Canada then was in the grip of a patriotic fervour brought on by the coming of Confederation.

Muir didn't take to the notion at all," according to the account of Ronald Hambleton, newspaper columnist. "What!" he said, "Write a song, words and all, in only two days — impossible!" But Leslie argued him into considering it and even gave him a subject. As they talked he looked out the window and saw the coloured autumn leaves come floating down from the maples.

"There's your subject" he said.

Within five hours the song was written, copied out fairly, and Mr. Leslie himself licked the stamps that carried it down to Montreal. "The Maple Leaf" didn't get first prize, however. The $100 went to a poem called "Ontario" by someone now forgotten, while Muir's song got second prize of $50. That was the last cent he made out of it, for both accounts agree that he financed the printing himself and lost $26 on the transaction.

Writing popular songs, both words and music, had by this time become a

*Yours faithfully
Alexander Muir*

habit and a hobby for Mr. Muir. When but a youth he penned his first poem and set it to music. A visiting Scottish divine, Rev. Dr. Norman McLeod, heard him sing it and said:

"Laddie, ye'll be weel kent afore ye dee."

His love for and proficiency in music led him to become the highly regarded precentor of the Presbyterian Church at Scarboro as a young man, and formed the background for his literary and musical attainments. Music was his chief means of relaxation and enjoyment. He is said to have been able to fill the largest church with his powerful and melodious voice.

"The Maple Leaf Forever" was first sung in public on the occasion of the laying of the corner-stone of a church in Newmarket by Lord Dufferin, July 24, 1874.

Margaret MacTaggart, in an article in the Toronto Globe and Mail, calling on her memories as a student under Alexander Muir, tells of his love for music. When the students were tired from long study, she wrote, he would make them stand up and march around the room singing patriotic songs and carrying a small Union Jack.

This mixture of music and patriotic sentiments reflected strongly in "The Maple Leaf Forever," and in other songs he had written, for example "When the Canadian Boys Were There," with reference to Paardeberg, during the Boer War.

Alexander Muir was a devoted and active Orangeman. When he died in 1906 the Sentinel, official organ of the Loyal Orange Association, said:

"Wor. Bro. Muir was a staunch advocate of loyalty to the British Crown and Protestant principles. He was a familiar figure at patriotic demonstrations, where he took a prominent part in the programme, and always received a very enthusiastic welcome. He was a man of magnificent physique and matchless eloquence. The many occasions at lodge banquets and other public assemblies where he thrilled his audience with a recital of the encounter at Hart's River in South Africa when our brave Canadian boys were inspired to glorious deeds by 'The Maple Leaf Forever,' will never be forgotten by those who had the privilege of being present.

"Alexander Muir was a noble, kind-hearted, earnest Christian gentleman. His name is a familiar one in every Canadian home, and his fame will go down to posterity with ever-increasing glory."

Public tribute poured in from every class of citizen. The account of his funeral was three full newspaper columns in length and of the nature given to outstanding citizens. When the body lay in state in Chalmers Presbyterian Church, a stream of friends and acquaintances passed by the casket to pay homage to a man "whose simple work had been voiced by nearly every child in the land and had become near to the mainspring in the works of Canada as a nation." The Toronto World referred to him as "Canada's Poet Laureate."

The pastor, Rev. H. A. Macpherson, in his eulogy referred to Muir's patriotism which he said was "not in the jingo style, but real, deep-rooted patriotism with a purpose in everything inspired by it. He could sing the glory of the Old Land, but he deeply loved the land of his adoption."

There are many memorials to Alexander Muir in Toronto. The public school in which he taught on Gladstone Avenue bears his name. The Alexander Muir Memorial Gardens, opposite Mount Pleasant Cemetery, is beautifully laid out, on an inside wall is cut one verse of "The Maple Leaf Forever," and an imposing granite obelisk erected by the Orangemen of Canada marks his grave. A tall, stately maple tree on Laing Street, the inspiration for the song, is marked with a commemorative plaque.

The true memorial, of course, the one that Alexander Muir himself would have selected, is "The Maple Leaf Forever." The sentiments and the patriotism of the song are symbolic of his life and his work.

Nominations Solicited

• As provided in the by-laws of the University Council that govern the elections of the administrative bodies of Queen's, graduates and graduate-benefactors of the University are hereby notified that nominations of candidates for election to these bodies are not sent out except to the elected members of the University Council and to the non-graduate benefactors in the case of Trustee elections.

Nominations to the Board by Graduates

Graduates of the University (except those who are elected members of the University Council from whom nominations are solicited as stated below) may nominate two candidates for election to the Board of Trustees to succeed Dr. J. A. Hannah, B.A., M.D., C.M., Toronto, Ont., and N. M. Rogers, Q.C., B.A., Toronto, Ont. whose terms expire on March 31, 1968.

Dr. Hannah and Mr. Rogers are eligible for re-election. No other members of the Board should be nominated and no member of the University staff is eligible.

Candidates must be nominated by five or more electors in order to qualify. Nominations must be in writing, signed, and received by the Registrar of the University on or before December 31, 1967. The Trustees elected will serve until 1971.

Nominations of Trustees by the Benefactors

Benefactors who have contributed $100 or more to the University may nominate two candidates for election to the Board of Trustees as follows:

(a) Under the Act of 1912 (General) — one Trustee to serve until April 5, 1972, in succession to Mrs. D. W. Boucher, B.A., M.Sc., Kingston, Ont.

Mrs. Boucher is eligible for re-election.

(b) Under the Act of 1916, providing for the representation of the "School of Mining" (Special Science) — one Trustee to serve until April 5, 1971, in succession to D. A. Gillies, B.A., Arnprior, Ont. Mr. Gillies is eligible for re-election.

No other members of the Board should be nominated, and no member of the University staff is eligible. Candidates must be nominated by five or more electors in order to qualify.

Nominations must be written, signed, and received by the Registrar of the University on or before December 31, 1967.

Nominations to the Council by Graduates

Graduates of the University may nominate nine candidates for election to the University Council to succeed the following members whose terms expire in 1968: Mary Balanchuk, B.A., M.Ed., Fort William, Ont.; Dr. M. R. Bow, B.A., M.D., C.M., D.P.H., Edmonton, Alta.; D. C. Cameron, B.Com., C.F.A., Montreal, Que.; G. H. Hamilton, B.A., M.Sc., Niagara Falls, Ont.; W. J. McGill, B.Sc., Ottawa, Ont.; Ian MacLachlan, B.A., B.Sc., Kingston, Ont.; H. R. Sills, D.Sc., Peterborough Ont.; Dr. Marie L. Stock, M.A., Ph.D., Hamilton, Ont.

Candidates must be graduates of Queen's and must receive five or more separate nominations in order to qualify. Nominations must be in writing (permission must be obtained from the nominee to allow his or her name to appear on the ballot paper), signed, and received by the Secretary of the University Council, on or before December 15, 1967. The members elected will serve until March 31, 1974.

In the Spotlight

One of Canada's oldest flags has been presented to Queen's by E. W. Henderson, of the Class of Science '05, St. Catharines, Ont. This flag was flown on Dominion Day, 1867, and the coat-of-arms in the fly of the red flag contains only the emblems of Canada's first provinces: Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec, and Ontario — the old originals of Confederation

— but it also shows the buffalo that is part of Manitoba's crest, although Manitoba did not join until three years later. The flag, which is nine by five feet, was sold by Mr. Henderson's father who had a stationery store in Almonte, Ont. It was ordered by a dentist who wanted to fly it for the first Dominion Day, in 1867, and subsequently was returned.

Au Revoir! Yates Cup!

● All Tricolour hopes for retaining the Intercollegiate championship went agley when the Golden Gaels were defeated twice in a row by the University of Toronto Blues, 19-14 and 16-13.

As may be gathered from the scores there was little to choose between the two teams, but Varsity proved to be top-drawer opportunists, winning both games in the final minutes of the fourth quarter. In the second game Queen's held the vaunted Blues' offence to minus yards' rushing only to be scuppered when a high snap from centre permitted Varsity to get within field-goal distance.

The 19-14 score was marked up in the Reunion game in Kingston, and disappointed a capacity crowd. The following week the Gaels attempted to return the compliment for Toronto's homecoming graduates, but fortune decreed otherwise.

Queen's opened the season on a strong note, dropping Western by 42-14. The Gaels scored thirteen points in the first quarter, seventeen in the second, and twelve more in the fourth. Western did not get on the scoreboard until Queen's were out in front 30-0.

Against McGill, the Gaels won 41-23, but the Redmen were ahead 16-12 early in the third quarter. At this point the Queen's offence started to click and racked up four touchdowns, by Jamie Johnston, Doug Cowan, Don McIntyre, and Heino Lilles.

In pre-season games Queen's defeated Loyola 46-13, Ottawa University 19-6 and Montreal West Island Juniors 45-2.

A detailed account of the complete season will appear in the next issue.

Reunion 1967

THE Queen's campus on Reunion weekend has become an increasingly frenzied place during the past few years and this fall reached a new peak when the celebration of the 125th anniversary of the University was superimposed on the proceedings. It was something like a three-ring circus, difficult to see everything that was going on.

The regular Reunion program included a conducted tour of the University and City of Kingston under the direction

R. G. Hamilton, of the Kingston Chamber of Commerce, and Ian Macachlan; a tea on Friday afternoon, a University Reception in Grant Hall, mass meetings, the football game, the University Tea in Victoria Hall, the Reunion Dinner in Wallace Hall, the Reunion Buffet in the LaSalle Hotel, and assorted class dinners and dances and cocktail parties and informal gatherings, capped with the University Church service in Grant Hall on Sunday morning.

The regular Reunion events were preceded with a special program for the medical graduates in the form of the 12th Medical Alumni-Faculty Day. Speakers included Dean E. H. Botterell, M. B. Dymond, Minister of Health of the Province of Ontario; Dr. R. W. Ingwall, Dr. J. R. Gordon, and Dr. W. Jones.

The engineering fraternity also came with a special program, which included a reception in the new Chemical Engineering Building, a luncheon at 401 St. George Street, and a dinner and dance party at the Taraqui Golf and Country Club.

For the special convocation to mark the 125th anniversary of the opening of classes at Queen's the University produced a star-studded show in which twelve distinguished personages were granted honorary degrees and Dr. J. A. Corry delivered an address which had graduates clamouring for a chance to see it in print. The Review editorial board is happy that the University administration has authorized publication of the proceedings as an insert in this issue.

Before the Anniversary Dinner in Leonard Hall, attended by 700, there was a reception in the Agnes Etherington Art Centre. At the dinner the speakers were Dr. T. Matthew Black, principal of St.

Mrs. A. C. Plewes cuts the ribbon on the door of the A. C. Plewes Library in the new Dupuis Hall. The Library was named in honour of the late Dr. Argyle Campbell Plewes, head of Chemical Engineering from 1945 to 1962.

Mary's College at St. Andrew's University, Scotland, Dr. J. A. Corry, and Dr. W. A. Mackintosh. The chancellor, Dr. J. B. Stirling, acted as chairman.

Official opening of the new chemical engineering building was a feature of the proceedings on Saturday morning. Named Dupuis Hall, after Nathan Fellowes Dupuis who held a wide variety of academic appointments over a period of forty-five years at Queen's and who might be regarded as the father of the Faculty of Applied Science, the building is situated on the east side of Division St. just north of Miller Hall. Special guest of honour at the ribbon-cutting ceremony was A. G. Farquharson, vice-president (refining) and a member of the board of directors of Texaco Canada Ltd., and a graduate of Queen's.

John Kenneth Galbraith, prominent Harvard economist and author of The Affluent Society, spoke at an open seminar in Dunning Hall on Saturday morning. Dr. Galbraith was one of twelve who received honorary degrees at the Anniversary Convocation. A one-time economic adviser to President John F. Kennedy and a former United States Ambassador to India, Dr. Galbraith spoke on current social and economic issues and participated in a general discussion.

The students made an important contribution to the weekend activities, starting with a debate with a touring British team, and the Medical Formal on Friday evening. On Saturday morning the Alma Mater Society presented as the University Day speaker, Dr. T. Watson Kirkconnell, president emeritus of Acadia University, and author of more than forty books, who spoke on "Voice from the Paleozoic". A float parade which started at the Douglas Library and wound its way through the campus and the city was also a student project.

While practically all other events had to compete for attention, the football game on Saturday afternoon had the stage all to itself. Before a capacity crowd the Golden Gaels tried conclusions with Toronto Varsity and came out on the short end 19-14.

At the Reunion Dinner in Walla Hall Saturday night the guests of honour were the members of the Classes of 1911, some forty-five of whom turned up for the occasion. Dr. J. A. Corry welcomed the graduates on behalf of the University. Dr. T. Stewart Webster, Dean of Student Activities, was the chairman.

The Queen's Newman Club, second oldest in Canada, celebrated its fiftieth anniversary on Reunion weekend, with an open house at Newman House, 164 University Avenue, on Friday and Saturday, and a mass in Dunning Hall on Sunday morning. The program concluded with a luncheon in Leonard Hall Sunday, with Rt. Rev. J. G. Hanley, chaplain of the Club 1941-58, as the main speaker.

The official Reunion activities came to a close with a University Church Service in Grant Hall Sunday morning. Rev. Dr. A. M. Laverty, University Chaplain, conducted the service.

It is estimated that upwards of 1,200 graduates, wives and husbands attended the festivities of the weekend. Most of the classes scheduled to convene were well represented and, in addition, there were many graduates present from other years.

QUEEN'S 125 YEARS OLD

. . . . Queen's principal, Dr. J. A. Corry, came as close to bragging as a good scholar can when he said recently that Queen's "has been facing crises for a quarter of a century longer than Canada has."

So it has. But how Queen's has thrived on crises! During the 125 years that handful of students has grown to 5,800 and the frame house has multiplied into 50 buildings of Queen's own.

. . . . The first honorary degree from Queen's was given to Sir John A. Macdonald, also one of the University's first trustees. Sir John would have been as much pleased with the thriving of Queen's as with that younger institution, Canada.

Yates, Mrs. J. A. Corry, Dr. J. A. Corry, Mrs. D. R. Snider, Mrs. H. J. Williams; back row: F. A. Sproule, S. P. Eagleson, C. H. Cumming, D. R. Snider, A. K. Light, H. J. Williams.

ALL HAIL, THE CHIEF!

Miss Evelina Thompson of Toronto is elected president of the 22,000 member Queen's Alumni Association in succession to Dr. B. G. Ballard.

● Miss Evelina Thompson, Arts '38, Toronto, Ont., is the new president of the Alumni Association, elected at the meeting of the Board of Directors on October 20. Miss Thompson, who is teacher of secretarial science with Ryerson Polytechnical Institute, is the first woman graduate to head the Association in twenty-five years. She succeeds Dr. B. G. Ballard, Ottawa, in the post.

Elected as first vice-president was D. L. Rigsby, Sc. '40, Montreal, Que., project engineer with Aluminum Laboratories Ltd. Engineering Division, and as second vice-president, Dr. O. E. Ault, Arts '24, member of the Council of Regents for Ontario's Colleges of Applied Arts and Technology.

Appointed as directors for a one-year term were: W. W. Ashworth, Brockville; R. H. Bissell, Hamilton, C. E. Demers, Quebec, P.Q.; R. B. McRuer, Brockville; G. E. Perrin, Ottawa.

The results of the 1967 election of directors for a three-year period were announced as follows: Dr. B. G. Ballard, Ottawa; D. L. Rigsby, Montreal; M. Diana Blake, Kingston; Prof. R. J. Kennedy, Kingston; Dr. G. B. Robinson, New York.

Formal recognition was granted to the branch which had been formed in Bermuda and a warm welcome was extended to the newest member of the Queen's family. Mrs. R. N. Dobson, president of the Alumnae Association, was appointed as the official representative to attend the next meeting of the branch and to present the charter.

Bernard Trotter, executive assistant to the Principal and chairman of the Subcommittee on Research and Planning of the Committee of Presidents of the Universities of Ontario, spoke to the directors on University Government as the initial step in a program designed to inform the Board in this field.

Collection of Silver Presented to Queen's

Queen's University is pleased to announce the establishment of a silver collection, to be held and displayed in the Agnes Etherington Art Centre. The inspiration for this collection has come from two Queen's graduates, Dr. Stuart Houston, M.D., C.M., 1924, F.R.C.S. (Edinburgh), F.R.C.S. (Canada), retired Associate Professor of Surgery at Queen's, and Dr. J. Fred Houston, M.B., 1916, M.D., C.M., 1920, of Hamilton, and their sons.

This magnificent donation, initiated in December with a gift of more than sixty pieces, is a tribute of the donors both to the Centennial Year in Canada's history and to the Principalship of Dr. J. A. Corry.

The Houston gift is intended as the nucleus of a developing silver collection at Queen's and consists mainly of British domestic silver from the seventeenth century through the Georgian era. Two outstanding large early pieces are a James II caudle cup, beautifully embossed with acanthus and flowers, and a large lidded tankard made in Exeter in 1725. There is a fine pair of heavy cast and chased rococo candlesticks by George Wicks, London, 1742, and a set of four salts, with blue glass liners, by Robert Hennel, of 1777 in the lighter elegant style made fashionable by the architect Robert Adam. But perhaps the most swaggy item is a very grand centre piece of 1810 by the famous Regency silversmith Paul Storr, whose mark also appears on a pair of wine coasters of 1813.

The collection contains too a wide range of smaller pieces of domestic silver — spoons of all types and sizes, sugar tongs, candle snuffers, sugar castors, a cruet set, and a variety of soup, sauce and punch ladles, including two by Hester Bateman. An important early piece in this group is a table-spoon, with a trifid top, made by Charles Rhodes at York in 1678, a superb and rare example of provincial Restoration work. Also fine are a Norwich spoon of 1685 and one of 1699 by Lawrence Cole of London.

The silver is on display in the Art Centre for an indefinite period. It will prove of great interest and value to students, particularly to those taking courses in Art History, to collectors, and to anyone interested in fine craftsmanship.

HYMN

O God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,
Our Shelter from the stormy blast
And our eternal home.

A thousand ages in Thy sight
Are like an evening gone;
Short as the watch that ends the night
Before the rising sun.

Under the shadow of Thy throne
Thy saints have dwelt secure;
Sufficient is Thine arm alone,
And our defence is sure.

Time, like an ever-rolling stream,
Bears all its sons away;
They fly, forgotten as a dream
Dies at the opening day.

Before the hills in order stood,
Or earth received her frame,
From everlasting Thou art God,
To endless years the same.

O God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,
Be Thou our guard while troubles last,
And our eternal home.        AMEN.

D. D.

MATTHEW BLACK

Graduate of the Universities of Glasgow and of Bonn, Fellow of the British Academy, Dean of the Faculty of Divinity and Principal of St. Mary's College in the University of St. Andrew's, distinguished representative of the scholarly tradition of the Scottish Church upon which Queen's was founded, and of a sister university whose friendship we cherish whose writings on the New Testament and the Dead Sea Scrolls have established him as a world authority in his field and a member of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club whose handicap has grown with his academic reputation.

HENRY GEORGE THODE

Companion of the Order of Canada, graduate of the Universities of Saskatchewan and Chicago, Fellow of the Royal Societies of London and of Canada, proudly claimed by both chemists and physicists as one of their own, probing research scientist and teacher whose pursuit of the unknown has ranged from medicine to geology and whose mastery of the rare art of relating the scientific idea to technique and to organization has brought remarkable developments in the sister university over which he presides so ably.

JOHN DOUGLAS ARNUP

Graduate of the University of Toronto and of Osgoode Hall, accomplished counsel, learned in the law, jealous guardian of the reputation of his profession, staunch defender of the public interest, an imaginative planner of a system of legal education for Ontario that is much admired in other jurisdictions, whose far-sighted leadership as head of the Law Society of Upper Canada has brought the elusive ideal of equality before the law closer to earth through a comprehensive programme of legal aid.

GEORGE HAROLD ETTINGER

A graduate of this University in Arts and in Medicine, a loyal member for more than forty years of the Faculty of Medicine, who has served as head of the Department of Physiology and as Dean of the Faculty of Medicine, a leader in raising greatly the quality of medical education and research in Canada through applying the fruits of his own wide experience in research to many organizations, including the medical section of the National Research Council, who, despite his many services to his University and his Country, always gave teaching the first claim on his time, and who, since his retirement from the service of the University, has confirmed his addiction to hard work in his current post as Director of Research for the Alcoholism and Drug Addiction Foundation of Ontario, and reaffirmed that his gaiety and gusto are indestructible.

JOHN KENNETH GALBRAITH

Graduate of the Universities of Toronto and of California, Fellow at Cambridge and teacher at Princeton and Harvard; economist, social historian, teacher, satirist, public servant, corrector of the propensity of Scots to have too good a conceit of themselves, herald of the affluent society whose own affluence could not obscure his scholarly insight, luminous literary craftsmanship, humane and prolific wit, and a part of the treasure of North America.

WILLIAM ARCHIBALD MACKINTOSH

Companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, and of the Order of Canada, distinguished graduate and illustrious servant of this University who absorbed its essence as a student and nourished its inner spirit as teacher and Principal, balanced and discerning economist who has moved as a peer among the foremost of his kind in the world, weighty and much sought adviser of governments in war and peace, acclaimed in all his many roles for comprehensive grasp, masterly synthesis, and calm lucidity of mind.

HARVEY REGINALD MACMILLAN

Commander of the Order of the British Empire, graduate of the University of Toronto, forester, industrialist, philanthropist, whose farsighted contributions to the conservation of timber resources, whose equally farsighted and generous thought for higher education in his own province of British Columbia and elsewhere in Canada and whose telling influence on the course of expanding Canadian industry and trade bespeak a man who, through a long and fruitful career, has kept his eye on the forest as well as the trees.

JOHN RUSSELL MCCARTHY

Graduate of Queen's, Toronto and Columbia Universities, skilful teacher, eminent public servant, and former dashing baseball star, whose wholehearted zeal for effective education of the young, warm receptivity to constructive innovation and happy talent for getting the most out of a team as he flicks it with genially provocative talk, have earned him in succession the honour of the two senior educational posts in the Government of Ontario, first as Deputy Minister of University Affairs and now as Deputy Minister of Education.

LOUIS RASMINSKY

Companion of the Order of the British Empire, graduate of the University of Toronto, former student and now Honorary Fellow of the London School of Economics, economist with an esoteric and enviable knowledge of foreign exchange, who has, with universally recognized integrity and ability, served in turn the League of Nations, Canada's wartime administration, the International Monetary Fund, of which he is one of the founders, and for twenty-seven years the Bank of Canada where now as skilled and seasoned Governor he holds the confidence of the financial community and the esteem and respect of his peers throughout the world.

GODFREY RIDOUT

Professor of music at the University of Toronto, twentieth century composer with family origins in eighteenth century Upper Canada, whose numerous works are widely performed and published in Canada and abroad, an enthusiastic railway hobbyist who, despite his enchantment with the music of the whistle and wheels has always kept his conductors straight, and whose lively personal and professional contributions enrich the musical and creative life of this country.

PAULINE VANIER

Companion of the Order of Canada, Chancellor of a sister university, shining exemplar of the importance of the family in the social order, who gives to the Vanier Institute of the Family its most persuasive case history, whose life has been devoted unswervingly to the service of Canada and all Canadians in full partnership with a courageous soldier, a patient and wise diplomat, and a great Governor-General, and whose glowing faith, lively intelligence and unfailing compassion have warmed the hearts, kindled the hopes, and earned the ready affection of Canadians everywhere.

CHARLES HAYNES WILSON

Graduate of the Universities of Glasgow and Oxford, who grew in favour among the Sassenachs for twenty-five years, successively Lecturer at the London School of Economics, Fellow of Corpus Christi College, Oxford, and Vice-Chancellor of the University of Leicester before returning to be Principal of his own University of Glasgow, urbane and wide-ranging scholar in the humane studies, gifted teacher who has used the insights of history and philosophy to bring order to the dishevelled subject of politics, as skilled in the planning of new institutions of learning as in the leadership of established universities, qualities confirmed by his chairmanship, first of the United Kingdom Committee of Vice-Chancellors, and now of the Association of Commonwealth Universities, obsessive fisherman of great prowess who angles with as much artistry and sportsmanship in the fast water of government-university relationships in the lochs and burns of his native land.

Address of Acknowledgement

by

SIR CHARLES WILSON

MR CHANCELLOR, the plight of him to whom it is given to respond for a company as distinguished as that behind me on this platform may indeed be regarded as luckless, for he cannot hope to measure and express in appropriately individual language the varied feelings of delight and gratitude which animate us all who today have been made members of your great society. These, my fellow graduates, may well feel, as does your humble respondent himself, that their reputations for civility have been put dangerously at risk. After all what reputations they are — and I have just learned, as you have, from the citations so brilliantly read by Principal Corry what brilliant reputations they are, what varied ranks of learning and experience are here represented — Church and State, banking, industry, music, medicine. And there is a Chancellor too — I always defer to Chancellors. And such learned Professors — I am trained to speak very respectfully to Professors: Principals and Vice-Chancellors I take rather more in my stride. In any case their professional experience has made them familiar with the risks that I run in this kind of an address. They know that walk I never so delicately I am unlikely to come off any better than Agag in the end. But I wish indeed that I had the gifts of one fellow Doctor, Doctor Ridout, and then I would compose a piece for this ensemble, so that each might raise his individual voice in one general hymn of thanksgiving. I have comforted myself and encouraged myself to this appearance by a reading of the history of Queen's, for I have discovered that no less than five graduates of my own University of Glasgow have held the office of Principal in this great University. I admit that most of them omitted to be born in Canada, but all of them, like one man, turned to the West of Scotland for what in Canada's other language would be called leur formation. I understand that the model for the original setting of Queen's, at least so your history rehearses, was Edinburgh, as no doubt being the only new university around in Scotland at the period. But when it came to development and the long haul — well, they turned to Glasgow. I must not conceal from you that these five Principals held office one after the other, which has a very sinister ring. Between them they did whatever principals do for seventy successive years. And when I add that two of the most famous names of the professoriate in that great period of the University, Watson and Cappon, also received their academic nurture from the same benign mother, then I have the comfortable feeling of having talked myself in. I feel that the Principal of a University with so powerful a connection with Queen's need no longer apologize for taking up the time of the company.

I turn now happily to tell you that I bring greetings to you from sister universities. First from the Universities of Scotland, so deeply and numerous linked to the Universities of Canada, and to Queen's in particular. All her Universities, and there are now eight of them, send you their congratulations on this anniversary. From the oldest University, our mother St. Andrews, whose new Principal, when I solicited his suffrage for this occasion, said "With enthusiasm! Mind you, with enthusiasm!" From the oldest to the newest, the University of Stirling — appropriate name today. A lovely new place couched in the grounds of Airthrey Castle between the Ochils and the Wallace Monument, and looking south towards the Castle of Stirling itself. This very term it is taking its first guinea-pig batch of students.

I bring you the greetings of the British Vice-Chancellors' Committee, that is of all the British Universities. Finally, moving into a still wider company, I am specifically charged as Chairman of the Association of Commonwealth Universities to bring you the most cordial greetings and good wishes of that body, representing all the universities of the Commonwealth. All these — and my fellow graduates would join me fervently in this — would wish me today to congratulate Queen's on her achievements of her first century and a quarter and would bespeak for her a future of brilliance and prosperity.

The conjunction of a university birthday with the centennial celebrations of a nation is an arresting posture of events, which would lead any university philosopher easily and readily to reflect on the relations of universities and States. This is not the occasion for me to wander very far down that path. It is almost enough to say that most, nearly all, of the major problems of the universities in the future will involve the continuing restatement of these relations. The elements or principles of that relationship are easily enough discerned, and we do in fact repeat them frequently. The first element is that we need great resources now where before we managed tolerably on a slender purse. Now we need a heavy purse and we can only get it from the State. We need adequate freedom in the use of the money that we get and this every academic man knows profoundly. And, thirdly, we need as universities to become more fundamentally aware of our critical importance in the new national societies that we are building. We are their primary institutions for many purposes, not only as being in the front of the knowledge which they need, but as being the treasury, indeed the monopolist of the talent of their youth. We are, therefore, to nations more precious than rubies, and it is natural that they should wish to have their hand upon us and to guide us where they think we ought to go. It is equally natural for us to feel, out of the ancient tradition of centuries of university development, that no man's hand should be on us, even though our hand should be in his pocket. These are the elements, and there are others but, as I say, it is not for me, at this moment, in this ceremony, to dwell much upon them. I feel certain from looking further in the programme that we will hear a more authoritative voice on this subject in a moment.

Finally, perhaps, it would not be taken amiss for me to say, as a visitor, one of the two visitors on this platform from Scotland today, what a privileged occasion this is for us. May we bring a visitor's tribute not only to Queen's, but to the nation upon whose problems past and future the attention of the world has for a year been focussed. We regard it as a singular honour to be enrolled at your laureation today. And this is as true for all my Canadian colleagues in the band of your new Doctors as it is for Dr. Black and myself.

UNIVERSITY EDUCATION: PROSPECT AND PRIORITIES

by

J. A. CORRY, LL.B., B.C.L., LL.D., F.R.S.C

Principal, Queen's University

TO TALK about university education, one has to declare one-self on its purposes. But the aims of university education have been so much conned and recited that it is hard now to lift talk about them out of stale ritual or vacuous cliché. How does one say anything fresh about them?

The aims are many: the passing on of our inherited exact knowledge, the pursuit of new knowledge at the frontiers, the sharpening of intellects and the disciplining of minds to respect both facts and logic, the recruiting of new friends of truth, the opening of eyes to beauty in all its forms, including the elegant architecture of a reasoned demonstration. All this to lead on to understanding and compassion for the restless reaching of the human spirit for the superlative in some form or other in a world that does not easily yield such prizes. And still further on to the refining of knowledge and judgement and sensitivity into the beginnings of wisdom about "the troubles of our proud and angry dust."

All these aims have had their claims extolled before. I shall not ring the changes on them here. They are listed only to remind us of the range of entirely proper objectives a university may take, and of the large resources it needs if it is going to work at them all in high style, challenging and stretching the minds of the best students. It does not follow, however, that entrance to university should be limited to the "best" students, in this sense. Not even the greatest universities in their greatest periods have been able to do all this for all their students. Students can be led to these fountains of knowledge and insight but they cannot be made to drink equally of all the waters. We need not regret this as long as students of moderate thirst do not absorb so much of the available energy and resources that they set the essential tone and measure of all the university's work.

Of course, it is vital that students who want to explore the heights and depths can, given passion and initiative, do so effectively. However, even among the ablest and even with the inspiration of gifted teachers, the numbers of the explorers of the outer limits are likely to be relatively few. For them, the opportunity is enough, but it must be there.

The fact that many students have, and will have, strongly utilitarian interests is all to the good as long as their numbers do not overwhelm us and their interests do not dominate us. The world's work must be done. Much of that work requires knowledge and disciplined minds of an order that universities are best equipped to provide. The universities need to keep in close touch with the workaday world. Common sense and practicality never come amiss, even in universities. Again, however, it is essential that the temptation and opportunity to reach beyond utilitarian interests should be open before them.

Such opportunity is all the more important nowadays when the charm of predominantly utilitarian interests is diminishing for many students. The rapid rate of social change with its consequent unrest, the haunting fears of thermo-nuclear holocaust, the crumbling of older verities and certainties, all cloud the future and stir the student into anxious questioning of the whole human enterprise. There is now a concern about the nature and destiny of man far deeper than anything hitherto known in my lifetime. You have only to listen to the talk of students today to know that. There is a rapidly growing demand for education in breadth that bears directly on the apprehensions and questioning in their minds. It comes from students too concerned about the state of the world, and too eager for action in it, to be tempted into the detached scholarship that attracts the few. Satisfying this demand requires universities to have rich and varied fare to offer.

Yet it remains true that the university does not have to realize, in the education of every student, all its legitimate aims and objectives. This would be utopian. What it has to do is to hold ready for its students opportunities for study in depth and breadth, knowing that individual students will choose variously with varied results. This has its advantages because with scarce resources (and in a university, resources are by definition scarce) there are limits to what can be done. The university cannot put all its hardware into this capability to the neglect of other duties.

Indeed, universities collectively, as well as individually, will have to settle on priorities over the whole range of legitimate aims and objectives. Every individual or organization that wants to act rationally must do this because life never makes it possible to do all we aspire to do. In part, this can be achieved in higher education by division of labour, sometimes between the universities of Canada as a whole, but more often between the universities of particular provincial systems. The main areas for division are graduate work and research, where forbidding costs make division imperative, despite the forbidding difficulties. But priorities, or at least varying emphases that may shift from time to time, have to be set, within any given university, between graduate and undergraduate work, between research and teaching, and in the relative weight to be given to undergraduate offerings and instruction in different faculties and departments.

This sorting out of priorities and emphases is the most difficult and the most urgent issue facing Canadian universities. It is difficult because our past circumstances never permitted us much choice, and so denied us practice in making choices. It is urgent now because of drastic changes in the circumstances of the universities in these last years. First, the rising demand for access to university education has made a much larger section of the public deeply interested in the universities. Second, the urgent need for vastly more highly skilled, extensively educated people has made other sections of the public keenly aware that the welfare of society as a whole is heavily dependent on what the universities do and how they do it. Third, governments, which are the instruments of society for seeing that society's most urgent needs are met, have become the principal source of university revenues. Universities are so heavily dependent on governments that, for all practical purposes, the dependence is complete, giving governments enormous leverage on the universities if they choose to use it. The extent to which they do use it will depend on the temper of public opinion to which in the long run, governments must respond.

The universities will not be able to fend off an interventionist public opinion merely by pointing to the long standing custom of laissez-faire, which has allowed them to teach and study what they themselves like in whatever ways seem to them best. The public is now the leading patron of nearly all university activities. Throughout history clients have often found patrons unpredictable. Artists dependent on patronage who have nevertheless managed to remain true to their art have had to study their patrons as carefully as they studied their art.

For the sake of stark clarity, I have put the matter too crudely. The universities have an obligation to society as well as to the arts and sciences they profess, because society needs many services they alone can provide. So there is a duty to think hard about the priorities needed to redeem this obligation.

To those who cling to the classical conception of university autonomy, this may sound like rank heresy or craven jitters. It is neither. In their original foundations, all, or nearly all, universities were set up to serve what were thought, in a broad sense, to be important social needs. Queen's University was established to minister to the needs of a Presbyterian community for spiritual guidance and consolation — and who will deny the need? Universities have been at their vital best when they were interpreting the felt needs of society in a discerning way. They have been at their worst and their most sterile when they have neglected their trust and lost touch with the urgencies of their society. Universities in which scholars and teachers have been entirely a law unto themselves over a long period have usually gone to seed. Episodes in the history of renowned universities certify to that.

Of course, it is also true that universities have been at their second worst when badgered, intimidated and directed by clamorous agencies or towering authorities external to themselves. Like all bodies whose service it is to seek truth, they need freedom to do their work in their own way. Honest and perceptive scholarship, imaginative research, and inspired teaching — and these are what society really needs — can only be elicited in a climate of freedom. Honest and independent-minded men and women — and only such are suitable for university duties — will not work in cages, and they will not stay in institutions that seem to them like cages. If they do stay, it is because they have ceased to be that kind of persons.

It will be said, of course, that the public ought not to be asked to pay professors to indulge their passion for useless knowledge. Aside from the awesome problem of deciding, in any long perspective of human need and interests, what knowledge is useless, the answer is that a price always has to be paid for the gains of individual freedom. Even if society has to support some scholarship whose utility is gravely suspect, it is a small price to pay for holding free-ranging and eager minds to the service of the universities and of society.

Of the services that society needs from genuinely free universities, the most delicate and difficult, in the new environment I have spoken of, is the function of social critic. Every organized society remains imperfect, and so needs systematic examination of the substance and the mechanics of the just and unjust. The free farmer of the 19th century could readily diagnose and prescribe for the ills of his simple community, and he felt utterly free to criticize. The urban industrial society of today is terrifyingly complex. Its pathology is a distinct province of knowledge, and prescriptions for cure and care have to be sophisticated. More than that, those who are enmeshed in the webs of the massive organizations that dominate it are inhibited from drastic criticism. For the most part, the vital critical role must be carried by highly informed persons who are not themselves organization men.

It is not suggested that universities should take the whole burden of this role. Rather, they should be keeping at social analysis and diagnosis, awakening the critical faculties of their students, arming them with knowledge and techniques, to the end of that their graduates, dispersed through society, will be leaders in keeping the status quo under review. Of course university teachers and scholars must be free to take part in critical examination of our social arrangements, and we shall be the worse for their failure to do so.

As already urged, this is a delicate and difficult role to be called on to play. Interests that feel themselves threatened by the pattern of teaching carried on in universities, and by strictures issuing from university people, will object to public funds (taxpayers' money) being used for such purposes. They will say that we bite the hand that feeds us, and urge that the universities be put on a tight leash until this propensity has been subdued, and university people become "boosters" rather than reformers.

There is a further dimension to the delicacy and the difficulty. Unless and until we develop some other large scale arrangements for providing the scientific expertise and educated skills that society in this age must have, universities are the main source of that provision. The universities may be dependent on the state, but the great collective organizations of our day, including governments, are dependent on the universities. More than at any other time in history, knowledge is power, and to be the main provider of knowledge is to have the means to great power. As nearly always happens, those who have the keys to power will use them. So, universities come to share temporal power. Without being presumptuous enough to say the universities are, or have been, bearers of spiritual power, the analogy between the universities and the mediaeval church becomes a tempting one.

The universities are a source of wonder and mystery that passes normal understanding. The laboratories, computers, and libraries excite somewhat the same kind of awe as did the rituals, liturgy, vestments and stained glass windows of the mediaeval cathedrals. While university students and teachers certainly do not claim benefit of clergy, the universities themselves are exempt from taxation! Members of university staffs sometimes sounds superior, unwittingly no doubt, when they make bold to criticize the temporalities that occupy the ground around them. In this, they suggest an analogy to the troublesome priests who were such a vexation to mediaeval rulers.

While resisting stoutly the temptation of this analogy, I still see no escape from continuing tensions between universities and the governments that support them. Tension is fruitful, indeed indispensable, to the vigour of a society as long as it is kept within bounds, but within bounds it must be kept.

So, while defending their internal freedom on the broadest grounds of social policy, universities should be thinking always how to be both loyal and responsible servants of society and a fountainhead of responsible and informed criticism. Self-discipline is the most hopeful defence against discipline from the outside. This brings us back to the need for sorting out priorities. Within all the legitimate aims and objectives of universities talked about at the beginning, which should we now be stressing most? Where should we be increasing our emphasis and, if we haven't enough resources for everything, where should we lighten the emphasis, where mark time, where cut back the commitment?

Seeing that the call is for examination and thorough discussion, this is not the place, even if there were time, to be prescribing. All I shall do is suggest some areas for examination where our decisions will have a bearing both on meeting our direct obligations to society and on our retention of freedom to perform it.

Most Canadian universities are in the early stages of development of post-graduate studies in a wide range of subjects. This is a much applauded departure because all keen teachers like to have disciples who raise the excitement of exploring the further reaches of a subject. The post-graduate student is a better prospect for the purpose than the downy-cheeked undergraduate. Good teachers know, too, that to remain good they must keep alive in their subjects, and lively research interests help to that end. All this is for the better.

However, the excitement of these new ventures and the claims they make on energies have come at an awkward time. They have come along with rapidly rising undergraduate enrolment, large classes, and a shortage of tried and tested teachers. As a result, the quality of undergraduate teaching is exposed to some peril by the competitive presence of post-graduate students. The universities themselves share responsibility for tendencies in this direction. They have not always made it clear that devoted and skilful teaching of undergraduates is as good a passport to promotion and other recognitions as are achievements associated with graduate work and research. Perhaps they have been expecting more, in both undergraduate and graduate teaching, than the corps of teachers can give, and it is thus again a matter of clarifying priorities.

We have to consider seriously how good post-graduate work is going to be if undergraduate studies are not carried at a high level. Clearly, some of the research and some of the advanced specialized training needed can be provided in research institutes and other agencies outside the universities. Only the universities, and no one else, are going to provide systematic and liberal education for undergraduates. If they do not do it, it will not be done.

Moreover, much the largest part of our duty to society is in undergraduate education. The great mass of students are, and will be, undergraduates. The quality of attention and education they get will pretty nearly determine — and rightly so — the judgement of the public upon us — something worth remembering.

In most universities, the majority of undergraduates are, and will be, in the Faculty of Arts and Science. A big part of our obligation is focussed here. It is also the area where universities have the greatest freedom to set their own patterns. In the professional faculties and schools, professional standards determine a large part of the curriculum and leave less freedom to set the measure of the education. So I shall say here only that, in setting priorities in the general university budget, support for professional education must take account of the heavy obligations to general education.

Aside altogether from such questions, it is necessary to consider priorities and emphases within the Faculty of Arts and Science. Many subjects of study which, in the nineteenth century and earlier, were covered by the cloak of Natural Philosophy have emerged as independent disciplines, highly complex specialties, often spawning numerous sub-specialties. (These are, of course, what we now know as the natural sciences). Moreover, the great prestige of the natural sciences and scientific method has moved the studies that have to do with man and the way he fits into his world strongly in the same direction. In the several fields of the liberal arts, specialties and sub-specialties also flourish.

In many circles now, a higher respect is accorded to the man who digs deeply in a sector of almost any field than to the one who commits himself to trying to get a rounded, general view. This pushes many scholars into deeper and narrower specialization, and the excitement of pioneer discovery in the depths of a specialty weakens for many the attempt to see the entire human enterprise, and to see it whole.

Very strong pressure in this direction has developed suddenly and recently with the big upsurge in post-graduate studies. The graduate student is not bent on broadening and deepening his general education. He is immersed in specialized studies. He comes out with a graduate degree and very heavy investment in specialty on which he hopes to realize annual dividends in his life work.

All this is easily understandable and anyone who complains about it takes on a heavy burden of justification. Specialization is the price to be paid for the rapid winning of new knowledge. The accumulated knowledge that lies around us everywhere is so vast that a rounded general view which takes proper account of what is known is nearly impossible. The rate at which new knowledge is being gathered makes the enterprise still more forbidding. The man who aspires to the rounded and general view and spreads himself over a wide field exposes himself to the comment that if he only knew a little about the subject he is talking about at the moment, he would know a little about everything!

Yet it is important to consider some consequences of heavy specialization. The man who becomes an erudite specialist to the neglect of other subjects that touch on his own, and at the cost of denying himself experience of other dimensions of life, does not know at all how his knowledge, be it ever so profound, fits into the scheme of things entire. Even specialists in the liberal arts, who want to be objective after the fashion of science, are tempted to confine themselves to problems that are measureable by scientific standards. Insofar as they yield to this temptation, they exclude from their consideration the aspiring and evaluative side of man's nature, a dimension that must have an important place in a general, liberal education. If we can't talk about what constitutes the good life, is there much point in talking at all? Yet the tendency about which I am speaking is strong enough to have provoked this comment: "The sort of prudery that once proscribed the discussion of vice now proscribes the discussion of virtue."

Narrow specialists of whatever kind are ill-fitted to share in determining the uses to which our vast new scientific knowledge is going to be put in our social life. But we know it will continue to be put to use there, adding new factors of complexity to our society and forcing a still faster pace of social change.

In fact, it comes to this: indirectly but nonetheless effectively for that, universities are forcing the pace of social change. While we in the universities feel a large responsibility to advance exact knowledge in all fields and to educate specialists, are we conscious of any comparably pressing obligation to study and to teach how society is to cope with accelerating social change, how technological developments, which threaten to get out of control, can help or hinder making this earth a garden for the human spirit, how individual character is to remain stable if everything else becomes fluid?

The present disaffection in a section of the student body can easily be exaggerated. It is marked enough, however, to show that something is seriously wrong. Is it not probable that, among other things, they are jarred by the pace of change and alarmed by the fluidity of any future they can see. They do not know at all what kind of a world they are going to have to live in except that it will not be their fathers' world. They want no part of the massive organizations, called the establishment, that are so omnipresent today. They suspect that the universities lack answers to the questions posed above, and in any large sense, they are right.

No one really knows how to control the social impact of the massive organizations that use the new science and the new technology as the vehicle of their own advance. Universities can do something to explore the means and nourish the necessary spirit by giving much more attention to the study of man and society, aiming at a wider awareness of, and a deeper sensitivity to, civilized ends and purposes. If we are not providing this service for society, what case can we really make for freedom for the universities? If we do want to provide it all adequately, we shall have to keep our priorities under review.

An argument for the need for balance between science and the social and humane studies is not a depreciation of the importance of science. The relentless probing of the mysteries of his world is a large part of the grandeur of man. Also, whether we talk of health, or relief from the drudgery of unending labour, or whatever, science has magnificent humane achievements to its credit. If not diverted by political upheaval, it will go on opening up new possibilities of a richer and nobler life. Acknowledging all this, it has to be remembered that all science can do is to create possibilities. The concern here is that a rate of scientific advance which outruns the capacity for social absorption of its discoveries will make its humane achievements irrelevant and frustrate the possibilities it opens up. If that happens, science too becomes irrelevant.

Science has no useful comment on the values by which men should live, and relatively little to say on how they can or should organize themselves for the good life. It makes it possible for us to live more richly and humanely but does not tell us how to do it. In the international relations of this century, we have already had the object lesson. If we cannot learn how to live together on this globe, science will be turned to destructive horrors, and we shall all become play-mates of the stars much sooner than we want to.

There are, therefore, pressing questions of priorities to consider. The universities must, and should, serve their society because they are a part of it and have everything at stake in its welfare and its sanity. That is why rapid social change without much sense of direction is so critical a matter. But service to society may be conceived in diverse ways. The public arrangements, and even we ourselves sometimes, may conceive it too narrowly and look at the universities mainly as producers of knowledge, and of skilled manipulators of that knowledge, the market for which could be measured, the models prescribed, and production automated.

The broader conception pressed here is that the most essential service is to be moulders of men and women who get a vision of the good life and the good society from their universities. And if we are to talk in terms of production, a by-product of such service would be an enlarged constituency that understands clearly why universities need freedom in carrying on their work.

In conclusion, I would not want it thought that I overlook the occasion that brings us here today, the 125th anniversary of the commencement of teaching at Queen's University. Queen's has a proper pride in what it has done for more than a century in its devotion to teaching, often in strain and adversity but never lacking in spirit and resolution. I have not dwelt on the past because the future will not wait for us to do so. The biggest issues of the future affect all universities similarly, so the discussion has been general in its bearing and not particular. In particular, two things. First, an assertion: if Queen's University is to be true to its genius, it must go from strength to strength as a teaching institution. Second, an admission: in what I have been saying, I have not been free from the bias of long association with this University and the tradition of teaching, fearless inquiry, and loyal service to Canada which it has honoured for so long.

THE REVEREND MATTHEW BLACK, D.D.

Mr. Chancellor:

Dr. Corry, your distinguished Vice-Chancellor — whom I greet as an honorary graduate of St. Andrews — has been reported in the Press as suggesting at Banff on Tuesday that “Canadians should be studying [in the Universities] to get the horse back before the cart again, by making science and technology the servants of cultural and spiritual values as well as material needs.” That is a sentiment to which many of us will say a heartfelt Amen. I mention it here, Mr. Chancellor, simply to point out that in calling on me now for this toast you have certainly on this occasion put the clerical cart before the secular horse! . . .

Mr. Chancellor, first of all may I thank you for the honour you have today conferred on me personally. It is no small distinction to be included in your 125th Birthday Honours list; and I am truly and sincerely grateful.

At the same time I am not unmindful that in inviting me to come all the way from St. Andrews, Scotland, for this occasion you have had other things in mind besides Matthew Black: in honouring me you are also honouring those old Scottish Divines who brought Scottish learning to Canada and thus laid the foundations of this great institution; in honouring me you are also honouring the Church of Scotland for the part it played in that early settlement; and in honouring me you are also paying your respects to the senior and oldest Scottish university.

This seems an appropriate point, Mr. Chancellor, for me to convey to Queen's University the greetings and felicitations of St. Andrews on this auspicious occasion, conjointly with those of the newly created University of Dundee, where Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother, has just been installed as first Chancellor. So I bring you salutations from Scotland's oldest university, born 1410 and still going strong; and from her newly born offspring across the Tay. I would also be failing in my duty as a Presbyterian Scot if I did not add that the Church of Scotland, as I shall illustrate presently, takes a lively interest in this 125th Anniversary of your foundation.

There is a verse in Scripture which bids 'All those that seek after righteousness' to 'look to the rock whence ye are hewn and to the hole of the pit whence ye are digged'. I am not sure of the propriety of applying the first part of this text (about 'All those that seek after righteousness') to an academic body such as Queen's University, though your Presbyterian ancestors would have had no hesitation: but I am in no doubt that the rock whence Queen's University was hewn was a Scottish rock — it was something even more difficult to handle, a Scotch Presbyterian rock.

First you had a piece of Edinburgh rock, if I may continue my Biblical figure. As Sir Charles Wilson reminded us this afternoon, the University was founded on the pattern of Edinburgh not because it was the only modern one, but because the Edinburgh College had been Presbyterian from the beginning. The first principal of the Scottish Presbyterian College in Kingston, as it was first known (it might have been called St. Andrew's Presbyterian College) was the Rev. Thomas Liddell of Lady Glenorchy's Church, Edinburgh. He had been appointed by the trustees on the recommendation of the then Colonial Committee of the Church of Scotland; and he arrived bearing the Royal Charter and a letter of introduction in December 1841. (The letter was written by a member of the Colonial Committee and read: "I send the present by the Rev. Principal Liddell, to whose care I have committed the Charter of Queen's College and I sincerely hope that both principal and charter may reach Kingston in safety; to protect the College from loss I shall, however, insure the latter.")

Liddell was ably assisted by the Rev. Peter Colin Campbell, also an Edinburgh graduate, but one who had emigrated and settled as a minister in Brockville; he was to return to Scotland all too soon to become first professor of Greek, then principal of Aberdeen University. These two stout-hearted Scotsmen met their classes on 7th March, 1842, in a small frame house in Colbourne Street with 52 books, 10 or 15 students, and they taught the whole theological spectrum with classics, logic, mathematics and natural philosophy thrown in for good measure.

The story of the long battle for Queen's University is better known to you than to me: I can, however, shed one ray of light on one of the chief protagonists. As everyone knows, it was a battle between Scotch-Canadian Presbyterian, William Morris (Paisley born, he had emigrated with his family as a boy) and the Rev. John Strachan, the first Bishop of Toronto. In the end it was Morris's rock-like determination which won the day. Strachan himself was an ex-Presbyterian Scot from Aberdeen: he began his career — and this is my contribution to the history of Queen's — as schoolmaster at Dunino near St. Andrews and Session Clerk of the Collegiate Church of St. Salvator's College, St. Andrews, in the same parish.

One last name among these pioneering spirits I must mention — your second principal, the Rev. William Leitch. Leitch was a Rothesay man who began his career after graduating M.A. in Glasgow in 1838, as assistant to the professor of astronomy in that university. He was presented in 1843 to the Parish of Monimail in Fife where he ministered for the next 18 years. He came to Kingston in 1860 at the age of 48 and died suddenly in 1864.

As soon as it was known in the Presbytery of St. Andrews of my coming to Kingston I received a letter from the Rev. William McCraw, a former minister of Monimail. Mr. McCraw writes to say that like his predecessor, Dr. Liddell, Leitch was "a man of solid and extensive attainments" . . . He retained his interest in astronomy, mathematics and practical science during his long ministry in Monimail. There was a giant telescope in the lobby of the manse, and microscopes in the study.

He kept bees as a scientific study and addressed the British Association on the project. He was a popular lecturer on astronomy, electricity and 'artillery projectiles'. He devised a system of heating churches by warm air and the ducts of his heating system can be seen today in Monimail Parish Church." But the abiding memory in Monimail, Mr. McCraw concludes, is of the good minister. "No-one ever heard him utter an unkind or ungenial word. Characteristic were his smile and ringing laugh."

After his death in Kingston he was brought home to be buried beside his wife in the parish where he had done so much. In addition to having succeeded in being a good man and a good parish minister Dr. Leitch appears to have contrived to be a whole university by himself.

I wish there was time to say something about Dr. Snodgrass and the Rev. George Munro Grant who finally turned Queen's from a small college struggling to keep alive into a great modern university. In one of his surviving letters Principal Grant has left behind a record of his ideal for his university. It seems old-fashioned to us today, for it conserves and carries forward those spiritual values for which those old Scotch divines stood (and which you are no less anxious to see maintained). "My ambition for Queen's is to make it a place where men will develop character. Better have 50 students in earnest than 500 nominal students. In all things multum non multa. If we succeed, it will be a training school not for ministers only but for men in every department of life."

I could wish for a double portion of the spirit of those old Scotch divines to do justice to this occasion. One thing I feel sure they would bid me say: However bright the lamps of learning which were lit by the Scottish Church in those days of your beginnings, the main credit for your creation and development into a great modern university belongs to the William Morrises and the George Grants of that day — to those tough Scots Canadians who laid the foundations, sometimes in sweat and toil and tears, of this modern Canadian University.

I ask you to rise and drink to the toast of The Queen's University!

RESPONSE BY PRINCIPAL CORRY

Mr. Chancellor, Ladies and Gentlemen:

On behalf of Queen's University, I thank Dr. Black for his encouraging words and good wishes. Aside from his perceptiveness and eloquence, the credentials, with which he comes from St. Andrew's University make his words singularly affecting. Past pieties and present affinities link us both to the Scottish universities and the Scottish Church. The direct links are fewer now. But, whether the heart is Highland or Lowland, the blood is strong. Whether or not, in dreams we behold the Hebrides, we are still deeply affected by the sound of praise in a Scottish voice.

We had guessed beforehand — and guessed correctly — that no single reply would do justice to what Dr. Black was likely to say. It was decided then to ask for a reply from one whose intimate experience here covers a long span in the life of the University, and who has made Queen's memories, her anxieties and her triumphs, peculiarly his own. Through you, Mr. Chancellor, I should like to refer for further reply to my co-respondent, Dr. W. A. Mackintosh.

RESPONSE BY DR. W. A. MACKINTOSH

Mr. Chancellor, Mr. Principal, Ladies and Gentlemen:

I acknowledge most gratefully, and non-objectively, the Principal's generous introduction.

What we celebrate today is not the granting of the Royal Charter, the beginning of our corporate existence, but the start of university instruction, which has continued in unbroken sequence to the present. The year happily coincides with our national Centenary.

In these days when full disclosure is exacted from nearly all corporate bodies, I think I should in candour explain to you that this celebration is also an innocent exercise in academic "one-upmanship". In fact, our neighbours, McGill University and the University of Toronto have much earlier Charters, but were much more dilatory than we in exercising them. I am not versed in the tangled history of either of these institutions. I understand that McGill displayed, year after year, a singular ineffectiveness in evicting a recalcitrant tenant. The sponsors of King's College, Toronto, were unable to come to terms with that strong-willed Aberdonian, John Strachan, who had left the ministry of the Church of Scotland, whether from conviction, or lured by the hierarchical vistas of the Church of England, I do not venture to judge.

This foundation was called Queen's, partly as a tribute to a young and appealing Queen, whose strong German accent few of her subjects had as yet discovered, and partly to cock a snook at King's College, Toronto, whose charter John Strachan held, safely and unused, in his pocket, and which, as the wasted years stretched out was left uncertain as to which of the Hanoverians their foundation was a monument, whether the wicked ones or the stupid ones.

The beginnings of this institution, as is true of many, were pathetically small and meagre. Nevertheless, we have reason today to be grateful to our founders. They set us an example of dispatch and economy, and gave evidence of some sophisticated knowledge of replacement cost. A Principal was quickly appointed, directed to collect the Charter in London, and to take the first ship for Canada. The Charter was prudently insured for £700, and the Principal travelled at his own risk. This established the first convention of our Charter: Principals are expendable.

Secondly, they established a principle of education for all who are capable. The inscription on the Johnstone Gate at Harvard imputes the founding of that notable institution to "dreading an illiterate ministry". Our founders equally dreaded an illiterate laity. There is an unfounded impression that this university was first established as a theological college. This is quite untrue. The academic powers of the University still stem from the original charter, which in this regard has never been amended.

They bequeathed to us a practice of non-discrimination and toleration. It may fairly be argued that this originated less in Christian tolerance than in Scottish sense of outrage. The arch enemy of our founders, John Strachan, appeared to place the signing of the 39 Articles above any measure of scholarly achievement. Our founders not only began on the course of non-discrimination, they persisted in it. Some years later, when the only medical school in the province required the signing of the 39 Articles as a condition of graduation, Queen's University, with urgent speed, opened a medical school and graduated a number of students who had completed all their academic requirements elsewhere, but had taken no instruction at Queen's University, nor, as far as I know, even been required to name the bones of the hand.

Finally, it was of some importance that the early students of this University came mainly from Scottish settlements, ranging from Cape Breton to Bruce County, and established the pattern and tradition of a university which was not regional in its constituency.

Though we have a Scottish inheritance in organization, in practice, and in academic ritual, I must confess that in 125 years, much has been diluted. I need only give one example.

In our Convocation, the sponsio required of our graduands has a clause in which they promise "to cherish a generous loyalty to this University". (I hasten to add that the University has never, as far as I know, exacted such a promise from its Honorary Graduates, at least not successfully.)

From a retired Professor of Chemistry from Aberdeen, we learned a few years back that this inoffensive requirement was but a pale, anaemic remnant of a really robust oath prescribed for graduating classes at Scottish universities up to the middle of the last century. In sonorous Latin the graduands repeated: "Moreover, I solemnly promise to repay, as generously as I can, my debt to this University, the gracious parent to whom I owe the cultivation of my abilities. And, if knowingly and willingly, I am disloyal to this oath, I yield myself to Him who searches out the hidden secrets of the heart, God the avenger and punisher. So help me God."

We timidly remind our graduates from time to time that their benefactions are deductible from taxable income.

For thirty odd years, this University was a feebly flickering candle, cast in Scottish mold, repeatedly almost snuffed out by church controversy or financial disaster.

We rightly hold in grateful memory, the last of the nineteenth-century Principals. It has often been pointed out he sought out high quality in his academic colleagues, and succeeded. He brought to a small colonial university a group of vigorous scholars with firm and first-rate standards. We need not be misled into believing that all were giants in those days. There were lesser figures who filled the interstices, but Grant achieved a cluster of excellence and a small but lively community of scholars.

What is less often noted about George Monro Grant, though it is equally important and more to be stressed in this year 1967, is that he came to this tiny institution after a splendid preparation, and with due respect, I do not refer to the University of Glasgow or the Presbyterian ministry, or even to Pictou County, Nova Scotia. He had been selected by one of his parishioners, the distinguished engineer Sandford Fleming, to be secretary of the expedition to survey the route of the Pacific railway, and he crossed this country to the Pacific by ship, wagon, horseback, and canoe. To this young Nova Scotian, whose greatest experience hitherto had been the "old country", this brought a transforming vision of a Canada that was to be. He converted a backward-looking Scottish institution into the most distinctively Canadian of universities.

All of his successors, I have to some degree known, and I have no intention of indulging in personal reminiscences. I have had the great advantage of seeing, year by year, the skill, wisdom, and the firm initiative with which the present Principal has served this University, all the universities of Canada, and particularly the universities of this province, in the novel and exacting circumstances of this decade.

I have had the great satisfaction of seeing appointed as his successor, a man I have known as student and valued associate in many activities. The problems which he will face are many and difficult, and he will have fewer certainties than our predecessors, but on this 125th anniversary I am content and confident.

Handwritten musical score for five staves. The first two staves are in treble clef, and the last three are in bass clef. The music features complex rhythmic patterns with many beamed notes. The first staff has a "ral." marking above the final measure. The second staff has a "# ral." marking above the final measure. The third, fourth, and fifth staves have "ral." markings above the final measure. The piece concludes with a double bar line.

J. G. Armstrong

C. H. R. Campling

J. C. "Bubs" Britton, B.Com. '30, has been appointed Canada's first full-time ambassador to Thailand. □ John G. Armstrong, B.A. '50 (M.Ed., Toronto), has been appointed consultant semanticist for Downie Advertising Ltd., Toronto, Ont., believed to be the first appointment of its kind. □ Prof. C. H. R. Campling,

B.Sc. '44 (M.Sc., M.I.T.), has been appointed head of the Department of Electrical Engineering at Queen's. He succeeds Prof. H. H. Stewart who will continue as a Department member and chairman of a planning committee for a new building for electrical engineering. Mr. Campling is past president, Kingston alumni.

Dr. L. A. Munro

Dr. Lloyd A. Munro, recently retired Professor of Chemistry, was honoured in a unique and especially warm manner when, in late September, his postgraduate students from past years came to the University Faculty Club in Kingston to honour this revered teacher and researcher by a dinner and presentation.

In presenting Dr. Munro with an autographed sheepskin scroll, decorated by symbols of his early research interests in colloid and surface chemistry, one of his first (1934) postgraduate men, Dr. Wallace Horn, expressed the feelings of the group: "Dr. Munro had an enviable capacity in respect of systematic and theoretical considerations, and he was acutely perceptive of new developments. His teaching, even of elementary courses, was continually coloured by a research mentality. We who performed research under him received a full flow of exciting chemical thought. While he was always attuned to the possible, the practical, the useful, nevertheless our postgraduate research did not deviate from the more fundamental approach, if that was indicated for best research training — but our concept was improved and our enthusiasm was consolidated. — We appreciated then, and we recognize and respect even more greatly at this moment, the qualities of humanity and humility — which have had a great deal to do with our unanimous desire to come to Kingston tonight."

In reviewing the honoured guest's career at Queen's, Dr. J. G. McNab, Vice-President, Esso Research and Engineering Corp., pointed to the fullness and to the quality, breadth and degree of usefulness of Dr. Munro's work throughout the years — in teaching as well as in research and research training. His authorship, a few years ago, of a unique and unusually valuable book, "Chemistry in Engineering", is a major contribution in itself. Dr. Fred Sexsmith of Erie, Pennsylvania, added fervently to the group's expression of respect, gratitude and affection.

In addition to the scroll and a purse, Dr. Munro was presented with a professional type tape recorder.

Good, But Not Quite Good Enough

The Golden Gaels, picked by all the experts to win the league championship, had to settle for second place when the University of Toronto Blues sent them reeling into defeat on two successive reunion weekends

What happened to the Golden Gaels? Weren't they picked by all the experts to be a shoo-in for the senior Intercollegiate championship? The Kingston Whig-Standard reported the students' attitude in a story headlined "What, Lose? Not Our Gaels." Yet the best they could do was finish second after dropping two straight to the University of Toronto Blues.

Actually Queen's did come close to retaining the title won last year, but they just didn't quite have the manpower. The losses by graduation to last year's team hurt more than anticipated, and injuries to key players had, if you will pardon the expression, a crippling effect.

The Gaels had a poor day when they faced the Blues in Kingston on Reunion weekend, but even at that they were leading late in the fourth quarter. An intercepted pass on their own goal-line seemed to have got them out of their last spot of trouble, but an interference call on the same play gave the ball to Varsity, who promptly scored. The Blues deserved to win and win they did.

Queen's scored a touchdown in the first six minutes but the Torontos stiffened and the score was only 14-10 for Queen's at the half. In the second half the Blues took over and had a bigger margin on the play than the two singles and the converted touchdown would indicate. Individually Queen's showed flashes of form, and defensively the team played well, but the offense spluttered and couldn't keep a drive going.

The return game in Toronto was supposed to present a different picture and in a way it did for Queen's dominated the statistics as decidedly as the Blues had done in Kingston, but the result was the same. Varsity won 16-13 and it was goodbye Yates Cup!

Queen's again started with a rush, scoring a major in the first two minutes of play, on the strength of a 50-yard run by Mike Hartley and a 21-yard dash by Jamie Johnston. The Blues tied up the score when they got possession on the Queen's seven, following a quick kick by the Gaels — the surprise element of the strategy backfired when the ball went straight up in the air.

Mike Hartley, No. 30, breaks away from a swarm of Western tacklers for a good gain. Also visible are Ron Clark, 26, Jim Shea, 61, Doug Cowan, 22, lower right hand corner.

Despite a couple of other kicks that misfired and four Tricolour fumbles of which only one was recovered, the score was 13-13 late in the fourth quarter. Still dominating the play, but unable to score the Gaels blew their last chance when a high snap lost them the ball at midfield and shortly afterward the Blues kicked the winning field-goal.

This game had a little bit of everything, most of it bad from the Queen's point of view. Would you believe it possible to kick from the 10-yard line and not score? Queen's managed to do it. The kick was short, took a bounce back into the swarm of Tricolour tacklers who were then called for no yards. It was that kind of a game.

Queen's started impressively, knocking off Western 42-14 in the season's opener at Kingston. The Gaels ran up 30 points before Western got on the scoreboard with touchdowns by McIntyre, Chown, VanBuskirk, and Plancke. The Mustangs stiffened in the second half, but still Queen's looked as good as their advance notices.

In the return game Queen's defeated the Purple and White 15-10, but had to come from behind to do it. Western with a young team showed great improvement during the season, tying Varsity in one game and losing the other by a touchdown that was called back.

Against McGill the Gaels won 41-23 and 15-10. In the first game McGill was leading 16-12 in the third quarter, before the offense started to produce. In the second game Queen's had to come from behind with a single and a converted touchdown in the fourth quarter to win.

The weather played a big role in all the games. As far as Queen's were concerned only two games were played on comparatively fast fields and then after a week's steady rain. The cleats invented by Hal "Moose" McCarney, assistant coach of the Gaels, might have given the Tricolour an edge except that by now most of the teams in Canada have the

Archivist Requires Help

In the article on University Archives which appeared in the July-August issue of the Review the claim was made that Queen's boasts archives of impressive proportions and part of the success in this area was credited to the fact that Queen's was one of the first Canadian universities to appoint a full-time archivist. The archivist was E. Charles Beer, who served on the staff 1960-66, and is presently associated with the Baker Memorial Library at Dartmouth College.

Mr. Beer is engaged on what is known as the Webster Papers Project, helping to locate and record correspondence (both communications to and from), as well as other manuscript writings of the American statesman Daniel Webster (1782-1852), who as Secretary of State took a leading part in the negotiation of the Webster-Ashburton Treaty of 1842. The Webster Papers Project, which is sponsored by the National Historical Publications Commission, will result in the preparation of a comprehensive microfilm edition, to be followed by the editing of selective letterpress volumes.

Any Queen's alumni with letters either by or to Mr. Webster or other Webster manuscript materials could greatly assist Mr. Beer and his colleagues by getting in touch with him at Baker Memorial Library, Hanover, N.H. 03755.

MISS FLORENCE O'DONNELL

Miss Florence O'Donnell died in the House of Providence, November 24, after a long illness. The funeral was held in St. Mary's Cathedral on Nov. 27, with Msgr. J. G. Hanley officiating according to the new liturgy. Interment was in St. Mary's Cemetery, with Father P. W. McAvoy reciting the prayers at the grave.

Miss O'Donnell was a lifetime resident of Kingston. She entered Queen's University in 1905, and at the time was the only Catholic girl on the campus.

After her graduation in 1909 she became one of the founders of the Queen's Alumnae Association. She was one of a group who met in the home of Miss Marty in Ottawa to organize a campaign to establish a women's residence at Queen's, and she obtained the first gift to construct Ban Righ Hall.

She was also one of the founders of Kingston Association of Girl Guides. For many years she represented the Girl Guides and Queen's Alumnae on the Local Council of Women; later she represented the Hotel Dieu Hospital Auxiliary on the Local Council.

She was a life member of Kingston Red Cross, the Catholic Women's League and Notre Dame Alumnae. She was also active in the St. Mary's Hospital Auxiliary.

Shortly after graduating from Queen's she organized study sessions for the small group of Catholic coeds then on the campus. This was the forerunner of the Newman Club, which was established in 1917. From the beginning she was a faithful supporter of Newman Club, and was one of the founders of Newman Club Alumni in 1945. She was its honorary vice-president at the time of her death. In 1964 she was honoured by Newman Club Alumni for her work with these organizations; in her name a painting was presented to Ban Righ Hall.—J.G.H.

CONTRACTS AWARDED

Contracts totalling $4,110,223 have been awarded for construction of two buildings at Queen's.

Pentagon Construction Co. Ltd., Montreal, Que., will build the $2,125,440 new mathematics building on University Avenue — a structure of three storeys with two additional underground levels.

Contract for the new psychology building, which will cost $1,984,783, was given to M. Sullivan and Son, Kingston, Ont. The rectangular, four storey building will be erected on the site of the Jock Harty Arena.

“Moose Hoofs” as they are popularly known. The cleats are now being produced commercially and several teams in the National Football League include them in their standard equipment.

Queen’s placed five players on the all-star team, as compared to Varsity with eleven, Western with seven, and McGill two. Jamie Johnston and Bob Climie were named to the offensive team, and Bayne Norrie, Carl Di Giacomo and Joel Anderson to the defensive unit.

What about next year? The Gaels lose six, including Jamie Johnston, Doug Cowan, Bayne Norrie, Jerry Langlois, Bill McCarthy, and Guy Potvin. Johnston and Cowan have been the punch of the offensive team while Norrie and Potvin have anchored the defensive squad. Nevertheless there will be the nucleus of another good team.

Two new teams will be admitted to the league next year, McMaster and Waterloo, and this may well scramble the status quo in the senior college loop. McMaster represented the East in the College Bowl this year, losing out by one point to the Alberta Golden Bears.

For Coach Frank Tindall and his staff of Hal McCarney, Al Lenard, and Frank Arment it was a disappointing season, yet by the standards of not so many years ago it would have been regarded as highly successful. The Kindly Old Mentor first showed on the Queen’s scene in 1939 and brought his team home with a 3-3 record and within an eyelash of forcing a playoff with the power-laden Western Mustangs. Frank returned to Queen’s in 1948 and from there until 1954 the Gaels won 18, lost 31, and tied one. In 1955 with Ron Stewart, Gary Schreider, Lou Bruce and Gary Lewis, the Gaels won their first championship in seventeen years. Since 1955 Queen’s have won five more league titles and have been nosed out in two playoffs. Frank’s overall record is 72 wins, 61 losses, and two ties. Since 1960 the record is four championships, 39 victories, 13 losses, plus 17 wins in 18 exhibition games.

SYMPATHY SIX ORCHESTRA

In the Autumn of 1919, Queen's University was suddenly faced with an unprecedented Engineering class of some 220 strong (Science '23) about three times the size of any preceding Engineering class. Among the members of that class, there were a few who seemed to have some musical talent, and an attempt was made to organize a Science '23 Orchestra of some sort. The idea was spearheaded by the late Harold Salton, Sc. '23, although he himself did not play any musical instrument.

After some trials and errors, a group was formed, mostly with the idea of their own musical amusement. After several get-togethers some of the group were cajoled into playing a few dance numbers at a charity tea dance in Grant Hall. Much to the astonishment of the uncertain musicians, their efforts were loudly applauded. Out of this experience, the group was persuaded to accept a commercial assignment as a dance band for one of the "Social evenings" in Grant Hall. A dance band was born, and during the four years of its existence, it became the most popular dance band in the area, playing at most of the informal University dances, as well as many outside engagements.

Although the orchestra was very often referred to as Science '23 Orchestra, the name was established as "The Sympathy Six" orchestra. The personnel of the group changed slightly over the years, but the most consistent members are in the photograph taken in the old Science Common room in 1921, which included: H. S. Griffin, Sc. '23, pianist and leader; *R. H. Waddington, Sc. '23, Traps and drums; W. A. Dawson, Sc. '23, Trombone; *A. E. Chalmers, Sc. '23, Tenor banjo; Nelson Cooper, Sc. '23, Violin 2nd; *S. H. Root, Med. '24, 1st Violin. * Deceased
